Investment Monopoly Charges Hit At 17 Firms

N. Y. Companies Said to Handle 69 Per Cent of Stocks and Bonds

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Seventeen big New York investment bankers yesterday were accused of having a stranglehold on the country's security business.

The Justice Department told the Federal Court in New York that the bankers broke the antitrust laws in handling 14 billion dollars worth—69 per cent—of the stock and bonds issued in the last nine years.

The Government asked for injunctions against the banking houses and their partners, and asked also that the Investment Bankers Association of America be broken up by court order.

Counsel Denies Charge

Murray Hanson, the association counsel, last night denied his clients broke the antitrust laws. He said the Government's charges of improper lobbying were an attack on free speech.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark announced the suit to a press conference here. He said a long investigation—in which a grand jury sat for some time—persuaded the Justice Department that a security dealers' monopoly had grown up.

Clark would not say whether the grand jury had refused to return indictments.

The Government suit accused the bankers of conspiring to dominate the stock and bond business by fixing the prices and terms of new issues, and by strangling competitive bidding. The bankers were charged with conspiring not to compete with each other, to choke off competition from other investment bankers, to block sales to the highest bidder; to get around State and Federal regulations, to promote big stock and bond issues so they could make fees on their sale and to draw the business of buying and retailing stocks and bonds into a single market where they had an advantage over others.

The court was asked to break up the alleged conspiracy by ordering the bankers to decide whether they would advise a company that wanted to issue stocks and bonds, or would handle the issue, by ordering several groups of banking houses to stop forming pools to handle security issues jointly, by ordering the bankers not to place their officers and agents on the boards of directors of companies for which they handled securities and by ordering the bankers not to make agreements to kill competition.

Filing of the suit touched off a round of hot statements by the accused bankers and others. Here is what they said:

Col. A. M. Pops, president of First Boston Corp.: "We do not believe the best intgrests of either the consumer or labor or industry are served by this action and are confident of vindication in the courts."

Only 1156 Italian Marriages Voided In 18-Year Period

Rome, Oct. 30.—Only one fifth of 1 per cent of Italian marriages have ended in legal dissolution since the Vatican obtained control of matrimony in Italy in 1929.

The Vatican released statistics on the period between 1929 and 1946. During that time there were 4,750,000 marriages but only 1156 annulments. There were no divorces. The annulments were determined by a Vatican marriage court whose rulings were binding on the Italian state. Italian civil courts are allowed only to authorize separations.

Msgr. Andrea Jullien, who made the report, said some of the cases were "heart-breaking" but that the church felt that the proposed remedy of divorce was "incomparably more disastrous."

Soviet Agent Tried to Contact Atom Scientist, Hearing Told

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The big investigation of communism in Hollywood came to an abrupt halt yesterday with testimony from an investigator that a Soviet agent had tried unsuccessfully in 1942 to obtain "highly secret" information from atom bomb expert J. Robert Oppenheimer.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities produced no evidence to show that any movie stars, writers or other Hollywood personalities were connected in any way with the reported "espionage attempts."

The committee did turn out contempt citations against two more Hollywood figures—Ring Lardner, jr., and Lester Cole, both screen writers. They joined eight other persons on the contempt list when they refused to say whether they were Communists or not, or whether they belonged to the Screen Writers Guild.

Committee Investigator Louis Russell, a former FBI agent, said that Oppenheimer indignantly rebuked the approach made to secure information about his researches at the University of California with the statement that such a disclosure would be "treasonable."

Dr. Oppenheimer, now director for the Institute of Advanced Study at Princeton University, said of yesterday's testimony:

"I would like to withhold comment, either confirmation or denial of the statements in general or detail in order not to interfere in any manner with the agencies of the United States Government concerned."

Neither the Justice Department nor the Federal Bureau of Investigation would make any comment on the committee disclosure.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) chopped off the hearing in its ninth day with a promise that it will be started up again "in the near future" either here or in Los Angeles.

"The (movie) industry," he advised, "should set about immedi-

Rent Controls Continued in 3 Va. Areas

Alexandria-Arlington, Fairfax and Quantico Covered by Order

Rent controls in the Alexandria-Arlington, Fairfax and Quantico, Va., areas were ordered continued yesterday by Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon.

His action, he said, is in line with recommendations of various local rent advisory boards. The three Virginia sections were among 20 where controls will be continued.

In another action, Creedon's order lifted regulations from Tom Green County, Texas; Saunders County, Nebr., and the rooming house rent controls in the Alexandria, Leesville area of Louisiana.

Continuation Favored

The decontrol order is effective in Tom Green County—the San Angelo rental area—November 15; in the Nebraska and Louisiana communities today.

Creedon's statement said a communication from the Alexandria-Arlington rent advisory board said it had gone on record favoring continuance of controls.

"This defense rental area consists of Arlington and Fairfax Counties and the city of Alexandria," the statement said. "It had a 1940 population of 131,492 and at present contains some 37,500 registered family dwelling rental units."

Twenty Areas Affected

A unanimous decision by the Quantico advisory board favoring retention of controls had been filed with Creedon. The area contains the Magisterial District of Dumfries in Prince William County. It had a population of 7813 in 1930 and currently has an estimated 1300 rental units registered.

The 20 areas where controls will continue were announced as: Utica-Rome, N. Y.; Akron, Ohio; Gary-Hammond, Ind.; South Bend, Ind.; La Porte-Michigan City, Ind.; Kent County, Mich.; Wilmington, N. C.; Jacksonville, N. C.; Charleston, S. C.; Columbia, Mo.; Little Rock, Ark.; Fayetteville, Ark.; Mondovi-Durand, Wis.; International Falls, Minn.; Phoenix-Salt River Valley, Ariz.; Yuma, Ariz., Pullman, Wash.; Moscow, Idaho, and the island of Puerto Rico.

Truman Joins In Tribute to 20 War Dead

Military Leaders, Kin of Heroes, at Arlington Rites

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman and his chiefs of national defense yesterday joined in graveside tribute to 20 Pacific heroes, returned home for reinterment in Arlington National Cemetery.

It was a simple, solemn ceremony, given to prayer and tears and hope.

Families of the dead, kinfolk and friends, and hundreds of others who had lost loved ones in the war, lined the double row of graves in the open field just below the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, facing east toward the Washington Monument.

Flag-Draped Caskets

Mounted over the freshly dug graves lay 19 flag-draped caskets and a lone wooden box. The latter contained an urn with the ashes of Donald K. Hathaway, 3826 T st. nw., Navy air crewman who was captured, executed and cremated by the Japs in Formosa.

The dead, including 17 from Greater Washington, had fought in virtually every phase of the Pacific war, from Pearl Harbor through Iwo Jima to Japan, with the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Corps.

They were the first to be brought home from overseas for burial here. Altogether, 6000 men who gave their lives for the country will be returned and buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

President and Military

Services began at 11 a. m., a few minutes after the arrival of President Truman and the Secretaries of National Defense, Army, Navy, Air, State, and Treasury. Also attending were the President's military staff, and the military commanders of the armed forces.

The Army Band played a funeral march, "The Vanished Army," as body bearers from all the branches of the military service raised the flags from the caskets. Then

'Same Man' Looks to Both

Pope Denies Church and State Can Be Entirely Separated

Vatican City, Oct. 30 (AP).—Pope Pius denied today that church and state could be entirely separate and denounced "all totalitarianism" which he said seeks to make the church submit to the state.

The Pontiff spoke to members of the sacred Roman Rota, one of the three highest ecclesiastical courts, who called upon him at his Castel Gondolfo summer residence.

"The same arguments which the tyrannical governments of yesterday adduced against the church in its fight for the defense of divine rights and of just dignity and human liberty today are used by new rulers to combat her perservering action in behalf of truth and justice," the Pope said.

The differences in aims of church and state, he declared, exclude "that forced submission and, almost, insertion of church into state, contrary to the very nature of both, that all totalitarianism seeks at least in principle, to bring about."

However, he added, this statement of differences in aim of church and state "certainly does not deny any union between the two, and still less does it dictate between them a cold and dissociating auro of agnosticism and indifference."

"Who would so understand the correct doctrine that the church and state are two different, perfect societies would fall into error," the Pope continued, and "would not, above all, take account of the fact that church and state go back to the same font, God, and that both have charge of the same man, of the same natural and supernatural personal dignity."

Before the Pope spoke, he had been told by Msgr. Andrea Julian, dean of the Rota, that the court had been criticised on two grounds; that in dissolving some marriages it was bringing into the church "camouflaged divorce for the rich" and on the other hand was refusing to dissolve marriages "become humanly unbearable."

Gaming Jury Clears Police In Arlington

Calls Evidence Insufficient 'To Convince Us Of Collusion'

An Arlington County grand jury, ending its record-breaking deliberations, yesterday "found insufficient evidence to convince us of collusion" between gamblers and Arlington County police.

In a supplemental report, however, the jurors recommended a more formal organization of the county police department, including appointment of a director of public safety to correlate law enforcement activities.

The supplemental report, it was learned, did not point the finger of suspicion at any officials but contained the jurors' recommendations for improvement in the county government.

More than 15 recommendations were specified in the supplemental report.

Turns Report Back to Jury

Said Judge McCarthy of the supplemental report:

"I feel that you gentlemen have spent a great deal of time and have gathered some worthwhile information. I feel that somebody should have it, but I cannot use it and I am going to turn it back to you."

He explained that he could accept only their finding and any recommendations for criminal proceedings.

The jury's finding was returned at 5:22 p. m. yesterday at the end of the seventh day of sessions. Longest previous grand jury investigation in Arlington County was a similar probe in 1934 against the then county sheriff. That jury sat four days before exonerating the sheriff.

Find Insufficient Evidence

Yesterday's complete report, as read by Jury Foreman Earl Kirby, Arlington automobile dealer, stated:

"After a thorough investigation in which we followed through all leads which came to our attention and examined all witnesses whose names were suggested we find insufficient evidence to convince us of collusion between members of the Arlington Police Department and gamblers in Arlington County."

During their final deliberations, the jury had summoned Frank L. Ball, sr., Arlington attorney, for advice in preparing the report.

Immediately after the finding, Homer Thomas, attorney for Russell Scheele, 47, convicted Arlington gambler, announced he would not appeal Scheele's conviction last Thursday of operating an illegal lottery.

Scheele had been sentenced to five months' imprisonment and a $750 fine on the charges which later led to the grand jury investigation of possible collusion of police and gamblers. Date of execution of Scheele's sentence was set for November 7.

Confidence Vote Won by Ramadier

Margin Is Slight; No Reshuffle Seen Yet From Recent Local Elections

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Oct. 30.—The French National Assembly gave Premier Paul Ramadier's cabinet a vote of confidence this evening by a narrow margin.

His own Socialist Party, plus the Popular Republicans and enough Radical Socialists and Independents, combined to swing 300 ballots in his favor against 280 opposition votes, most of them recorded by the Communist Party. There were 18 abstentions.

To upset the Ramadier government its opponents would have had to muster 310 votes, a majority of 1 in a chamber of 618 votes.

Coalition Continues

France, therefore, will continue to be governed by a coalition of center and left-of-center groups. How long this can last is difficult to say, for the balloting in the Assembly appeared to ignore the tremendous vote piled up in the recent municipal elections by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's anti-Communist Rally of the French People (RPF).

But Premier Ramadier's victory may be explained in this way: That neither De Gaulle himself nor his Communist opponents are ready to make a bid for power. It may also be explained by the fact that center and left-of-center forces are not yet prepared or willing to choose between one bloc or the the Assembly prepared to vote this other.

The Premier fought doggedly as afternoon.

Calls for Choice

"The question," he said, "is clear. France must choose. Either it is to be divided into Russian and American camps, or it will continue to collaborate with all nations and maintain its national independence.

"Let those who are for France and the republic give their votes to the government. But I want no equivocation. I urge those who do not trust us or who hesitate to speak out clearly against us."

Before today's ballots were counted, leaders of parliamentary groups explained how they intended to vote. Guy Mollet, secretary general of the Socialist Party and leader of the party's left wing, announced support for the government. His words were significant, for frequently he has fought his party's right-wing leadership.

But ever since the Polish conference of nine European Communist parties, headed by the Soviet Union, French Communists have attacked Mollet.

Speaking Frankly

Russia's Aims Are Revealed By History, Byrnes Finds

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—6 of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers, Copyright, 1947, by Donald S. Russell, trustee of the James F. Byrnes Foundation (a charitable trust).

By James F. Byrnes

I HAVE SAID enough, I think, to indicate one cardinal fact that must be kept in mind in evaluating any Soviet action. The fact is that, to them, the ends justify any means. The question we must therefore ask is, what are the ends sought by Soviet leaders. In other words, what are the Russians after?

My experiences merely confirm an answer that is actually found in Russian history. Few Americans are well informed on Russian history. I do not profess to be. But I have learned enough to conclude that many of the problems which perplex us today have their explanation in that history. Despite the violence of the Russian revolution, the aims of Bolshevik diplomacy differ very little from those of the Czars. And the aims that Stalin and Molotov have pursued since the end of the war vary little from the demands they made of Adolf Hitler.

Russian expansionism, which has concerned us so deeply in the postwar years was clearly exposed, and strangely enough, by the godfather of the Communist revolution, Karl Marx. In a series of articles written for the New York Tribune from London in 1853, Marx dealt at length with "The Eastern Question." Among his observations were these:

As to Russia's antipathy against aggrandisement, I allege the following facts from a mass of the acquisitions of Russia since Peter the Great.

The Russian frontier, has advanced: towards Berlin, Dresden and Vienna, about 700 miles; towards Constantinople, about 500 miles; towards Stockholm, about 630 miles; towards Tehran, about 1000 miles . . . The total acquisitions of Russia during the last 80 years are equal in extent and importance to the whole empire she had in Europe before that time.

In another dispatch, Marx wrote:

And as sure as conquest follows conquest, and annexation follows annexation, so sure would the conquest of Turkey by Russia be only the prelude for the annexation of Hungary, Prussia, Galicia, and for the ultimate realization of the Slavonic Empire which certain fanatical Panslavic philosophers have dreamed of . . . The arrest of the Russian scheme of annexation is a matter of the highest moment.

How contemporary that sounds! Following 1853, the year of these dispatches, Russia continued to acquire territory right up to World War I. The total territorial gain of czarist Russia between 1853 and 1914 was 971,277 square miles, which brought the prewar area of the Russian empire up to 8,645,000 square miles.

Lost Vast Territory

THE advent of Soviet power in Russia was accompanied by the loss of nearly half a million square miles of territory. The new Soviet Union excluded the areas of Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which became independent states. Kars was ceded to Turkey; Bessarabia was returned to Ro-

Grain Exports Mount

Marshall Planners Ask Curb On Funds From Aid Supplies

Shipments at Current Rate Equal Total Of 8 Prewar Years

By John Ball
Post Reporter

America's grain exports to famine-threatened countries overseas will reach the enormous total of 305 million bushels for the six months from June 30 to December 31, the Department of Agriculture announced last night.

This is more than two-thirds of the 570 million bushels President Truman set on October 7 as the goal for the year ending next June 30.

Exports, at the present intensified rate, are equal to the total grain exports by the country during eight prewar years.

The Agriculture Department stated that the Government had by October 28 bought more than 275 million bushels. In addition about 89 million bushels had been earmarked for shipment by commercial exporters.

Export plans call for 33,869,000 bushels of all grains to be shipped in December. This is about four million more than allocated for November shipment, but less than half the exports of July and August. This year's export program differs from the programs for each of the last two years. In both 1946 and 1947 fiscal years the bulk of the exports took place after January 1. This year, in line with agreements made at the

Would Allow Nations To Use Money Only On Recovery Program

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Officials working on the Marshall Plan have agreed that European countries must set aside whatever money they get from selling American relief and reconstruction supplies to their own people.

These funds, in local currencies, could then be spent only for purposes of economic recovery within the respective countries. They could, for example, be used for wages on industrial projects or for reconstruction supplies that might be locally available.

The supervision of these funds is one of the unsettled questions that is making this week "hell week" at the State Department, in Undersecretary Lovett's words of Wednesday. The problem is not only being thrashed out within the Administration, but also with spokesmen of the 16-nation European group in advance of the imminent congressional hearings and debates.

There has been some talk from Capitol Hill that American individuals, appointed by the President or Congress, must supervise the spending of these funds produced from the sale of American food and raw matrials. The Administration view is that any such insistence by the United States

Recreation, School Aides Hit Report

Civil Rights Group Presented Lopsided Picture, They Say

Spokesmen for the District Education and Recreation Board yesterday defended the activities of their agencies, which came under sharp attack Wednesday in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

The education and recreation leaders said, in effect, that the President's Committee had given a lopsided picture of the District's treatment of Negroes.

The three District Commissioners, however, had no comment whatsoever to make on the report, which branded the Nation's Capital as a "graphic illustration of a failure of democracy" and denounced as "intolerable" the District's treatment of its Negro population.

Two city-wide citizens' groups praised the report as "hitting the nail on the head," and called for action to carry out the committee's proposals.

The President's Committee recommended an end to segregation in the public school system. Commented Dr. Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the Board of Education and acting president in the absence of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle:

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The stock market today ran into heavy selling which toppled leaders $1 to $4 or more a share, but late supporting bids cut extreme losses substantially.

Offerings turned urgent after midday when it was announced the Government was filing a civil antitrust suit against 17 of the largest investment banking firms. Subsequent bids stemmed the retreat, but declines were widespread at the close. Bonds generally trailed with stocks.

Why Warning System Failed?

Forecaster Believes Dry Ice May Have Affected Storm

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 30 (AP).—Grady Norton, chief forecaster of the Miami Weather Bureau, said in a letter received here today it was "entirely possible" that dry ice experiments carried out by the Navy during the mid-October hurricane "contributed to the unusual behavior of the storm."

Norton's letter was made public by Judge James T. Houlihan, chairman of Chatham County commissioners, who had protested to the Weather Bureau that there was insufficient warning of the approaching storm to permit proper precautions being taken in the Savannah area.

The hurricane first crossed the southern tip of Florida, moved several hundred miles into the Atlantic Ocean, and then curved back toward the coast off Cape Hatteras, N. C. On October 15 an apparent offshoot of the storm severely lashed the south Georgia coastal section.

During its over-water phase, the storm was "seeded" with dry ice dropped from a plane in the first Army-Navy experiment to determine the effect of such treatment on tropical disturbances.

The results of the experiment, Norton wrote, "are a military secret, and we can only speculate on the effects from the behavior of the storm.

"The original hurricane center moved northwestward during the night of October 14 to a position off Cape Hatteras, where it apparently dissipated," the letter continued.

"But Navy radar planes picked up a second center about 180 miles to the southwest a short time thereafter. It was this second development which, . . . after some hesitation and uncertainty of movement, started to the westward and gained hurricane force.

"By the time this was established there was not much time left to warn your community. We believe this is a very unusual sequence of events and, while we do not know just what effect the ice had, it is entirely possible that it contributed to the unustal behavior of the storm."

Taft Favors 'One-Bite' Aid Action By Congress

Would Consider Emergency Help And Marshall Plan At Same Time

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft yesterday proposed "one bite" consideration by Congress of both the emergency and Marshall aid programs, with similar restrictions tied to each.

As one condition, he proposed creation of a new Government agency, apart from the State Department, to handle all commodity buying, exports and allocations under the program.

A similar condition was recently proposed by Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), who led a special House Committee to Europe. Herter conferred with Taft late today.

Conflicts With Eaton Plan

Taft's proposal that Congress consider "together" the stop-gap and long-range aid programs is in conflict with the announced plan of House Foreign Affairs Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) to speed emergency relief to passage first. The State Department reportedly shares Eaton's view that interim aid might bog down in prolonged debate if linked to the Marshall Plan.

Taft told a press conference here he holds out a "vague hope" Congress will pass both temporary and permanent programs before it goes home for Christmas.

He said his proposal that Congress "do it all in one" was just a suggestion.

"I don't want to spend four weeks debating temporary aid, and then another four weeks debating the Marshall Plan if we can do both together," he added.

Similar Conditions Cited

Noting that the interim aid estimates and the Marshall Plan will be ready when Congress convenes November 17, Taft said "the same kind of restrictions and the same kind of boards" will be offered in Congress in connection with each.

The Senate Republican program chief, who only last week announced his presidential intentions, aired his views on these domestic issues, too, before moving on to Cincinnati last night.

1. Opposed return to price controls at any level, said the same went for consumer rationing, but indicated he is willing to listen to the President's plan for allocating materials.

2. Renewed his own five-point program for "stabilizing" prices via spending cuts, reduced taxes, controlling exports, controlling buying for export, and educating all segments of the population to voluntary restraints.

3. Threw down Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath's bid for bi-partisan cooperation in meeting the price problem by saying: "The whole economic philosophy of this Administration has been so completely at variance with what I consider sound it is hard to see how we can agree."

4. Opposed holding up the GOP's four-billion-dollar tax reduction bill until the Marshall Plan clears Congress. Taft said he thought Congress will get started on a new tax cut bill right away but did not flatly forecast special session passage.

Although Herter would not comment on his talk with Taft, it is

Soviet Plans To Boycott Korean Group

Gromyko Serves Notice As U. N. Unit Votes, 41-0, to Send Observers

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Russia announced today she would boycott a United Nations Commission which is to "observe" free elections in Korea and intimated that it would be barred from the Soviet zone.

Andrei Gromyko calmly informed the Assembly's Political Committee of the Soviet decision when it became apparent that he was losing a three-day fight against the American proposed commission. The final vote of approval was 41 to 0 with seven nations abstaining. The entire Soviet bloc refused to vote.

Gromyko States Position

It was the third Soviet boycott at this session of the General Assembly—all of them aimed at "vital" actions recommended by Secretary of State George C. Marshall. Previous boycotts were against the "Little Assembly" and the Balkan Commission to "watchdog" Greek borders against Communist dominated neighbors.

Refusal to abide by decision on the Korean commission was immediately interpreted by numerous delegates that the Russians would refuse to permit the group above the thirty-eighth parallel which divides the American and Russian zones.

Gromyko simply declared the Soviet Union would "not be in a position to participate" in the Korean commission without participation by Koreans in the committee and Assembly discussions. Asked afterwards if it means the commission would be barred, he replied: "My statement speaks for itself."

Preliminary to Main Proposal

But Dmitri Manuilsky of the Ukraine taunted delegates: "Go ahead now and try to hold a referendum. See what the Korean people say."

Today's action was a preliminary to the main American proposal for setting up a free Korean Government after two years of

Court Rules Child Can Be Guilty Of Negligence

The Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that a 5-year-old child could be guilty of contributory negligence.

The appellate branch issued the decision and ordered a new trial in the case of Richard McFerran, jr., 415 Brandywine st. se. The youth had sued the National City Development Co., 828 10 st. nw., last November for damages after he had been burned at a house under construction across the street from his home.

The judge, in charging the jury in the lower court, said that under the law a child of that age could not be considered guilty of negligence.

The appellate decision cited decisions holding that capability of contributory negligence of a child must be judged by the jury on each individual case.

List of War Dead Buried in Arlington

Twenty Bodies of Men From D. C. Area Reinterred After Return From Pacific

These are the Pacific war dead from Greater Washington who were reinterred yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Lieut. (j.g.) Randal B. Adams, USNR, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry D. Adams, of Gaithersburg. Lieutenant Adams, 28, a photographic officer, was killed in January, 1944, aboard an aircraft carrier in the south Pacific.

He attended E. V. Brown School, Chevy Chase; Fork Union Military Academy, and was graduated from Duke University in 1937. In 1940 he enlisted in the Naval Reserve, and was commissioned in 1942. The Air Medal was awarded him for "daring aerial reconnaissance" over the Marshall and Gilbert Islands.

Ensign Donald W. Augusterfer, USNR, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Augusterfer of 4422 New Hampshire ave. nw. The first Seabee to die overseas in World War II, Ensign Augusterfer dies on Guadalcanal January 1, 1943.

Born in Washington, he was a graduate of Central High School and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He joined the Navy in April, 1924. Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, Ernest H. jr.

Maj. Andrew A. Barna, AAF, husband of Mrs. Mildred J. Barna of 4006 62d st. nw. Major Barna died in Kunming, China, in August, 1945.

Born in Highland Park, N. J., in 1919, he enlisted in the Air Corps at 17. He received his commission as second lieutenant in the Adjutant General's Department and served with the Fourteenth Air Force in China.

Tech. Sergt. Shelby L. Cox, USMC, son of Mrs. Gertrude L. Emanuel, of 6106 1st pl. ne. Sergt. Cox survived the battle of Iwo Jima as a member of the 5th Division, but when it was retired to Hilo for a rest he contracted an infection which caused his death.

Born in 1907 at Blandinsville, Ill., Sergt. Cox came here in 1929 and worked as a mechanic. He enlisted in 1942. A brother, Robert Elton Cox of Washington, also survives.

Maj. Henry T. Elrod, USMC, husband of Capt. Elizabeth Elrod, USMCWR, of 2812 Lee blvd., Arlington. Major Elrod was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor in November, 1946, in posthumous recognition of his service at Wake Island.

Major Elrod, a flier, was killed at his machine gun post on the Wake Island beach when the Japanese assaulted and won the island December 23, 1941.

On December 11 of that year, he and Capt. Frank C. Tharin of this city, sank the first heavy Japanese warship, a cruiser, with eight 100-pound bombs dropped from their Grumman single - seated fighter planes.

Major Elrod, a native of Turner County, Ga., enlisted in the Marine Corps in December, 1927, after attending the University of Georgia and Yale. He was commissioned in February, 1931.

County Schools' Administration Praised, Blamed

Arlington County's school administration was the subject of both praise and blame yesterday.

Two university professors, after a four-day survey of county schools, described it as "efficient" in a report released by the school board.

The investigators were William R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia, and E. D. Grizzell, of the University of Pennsylvania. William Montgomery Smith, Arlington County board chairman, said they made the survey at the request of the board on recommendation of State education officials.

Curtis E. Tuthill, one of five candidates named by a citizens' convention, criticized the board in a talk before the Parkway Citizens Association, deploring what he called the board's "failure" to provide a program for handicapped children and specialized classes for teachers of subnormal children.

Veterans' Administration now is operating 32 former Army and Navy hospitals, six on a permanent basis and the remainder as temporary installations.

The 13 additions to Veterans' Administration hospitals under construction on January 31 will add more than 5000 beds to VA's capacity when they are completed.

School Aides Criticize Report

the laws of Congress. The Organic Act of 1878 and all appropriation acts presume a segregation of schools.

The Civil Rights Report failed to suggest or even intimate, Dr. Maurer said, that present conditions in many of the schools are almost entirely the result of war. Thousands of persons came to Washington to live and took up residence in areas where there were no schools. Populations also shifted to areas where they never before had lived.

School Efforts Outlined

"During the war years and since the peace, school officers and Board of Education members have pressed hard and constantly for school buildings to accommodate the increased number of students.

"In recent years in addition to transferring many buildings from white to Negro students, the Board of Education has authorized the transfer of teachers and salaries to further equalize education in the schools. Buildings are now under construction and plans are being completed for additional buildings for Negro students," Dr. Maurer said.

Harry Wender, chairman of the Recreation Board, speaking as an individual, declared:

"The committee didn't get any of the facts from the board or its staff. Some of its statements are just not true. The investigation was one-sided. It's another case of the voteless District not getting a voice in a matter pertaining to it, since no District citizen was a member of the committee.

Segregation Charge Contradicted

To the committee's charge that segregation has increased in the District during the past 25 years, Wender replied that exactly the opposite was true.

Wender said that segregation, where carried out by the board, was a matter of law, and not a matter of arbitrary policy.

"Since the board was organized," Wender insisted, "we have consistently devoted more money to Negro recreational projects than to white projects, because we recognize they need it."

Speaking as an individual, John A. Reilly, president of the Board of Trade, deplored the "pointing of the finger at the Nation's Capital," declaring that the committee had gone out of its way to cite Washington as "a horrible example."

"The problem is one which every right thinking person knows must be solved," he said, "but it must be done slowly and conscientiously, not with a lot of fanfare."

Reilly said that he believes that Washington has done as much as can be done with limited facilities to alleviate the pictured conditions.

Benjamin C. Sigal, president of Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, said:

"The report . . . in sharply calling the attention of the nation . . . to the shocking violation of elementary civil rights in the capital of the country, offers a real challenge to the people of Washington."

He said the committee's recommendations will remain a "dead letter" until action is taken to put them into effect. He announced the ADA chapter is calling for a conference of citizens' groups here November 15 to discuss action on the recommendations.

The Committee for Racial Democracy also praised the report, and said its annual conference, November 22, would deal with implementation of the recommendations for the District.

Rightist Quits Czech Post of Vice Premier

Prague, Oct. 30. (AP).—The sudden resignation of Deputy Premier Jan Ursiny, veteran Agrarian leader and also vice chairman of the right-wing Slovak Democratic Party, thrust a big new question mark tonight into Czechoslovakia's Communist-inspired politics.

Ursiny's party, one of the most conservative groups in the country, and Slovakia's dominant party, has been the constant target of attacks by Slovak and Czech Communists.

Two of Ursiny's secretaries were arrested recently, after security police had searched his office in Prague while looking for evidence of an antigovernment plot.

Ursiny said at the time that he had no knowledge of his secretaries' activities.

Shortly afterward, two Slovak Democratic deputies who were also party secretaries, were divested of parliamentary immunity and were immediately arrested.

Dr. Fedor Hodja, son of a former Slovak Premier and also secretary of the party, has been publicly assailed by the Communists, and a Bratislava court has asked the state prosecutor to demand that Hodja's parliamentary immunity be lifted.

Another attack on the Slovak Democratic Party came tonight in Bratislava when nearly 2000 delegates of the Communist-dominated Labor Federations, representing 100,000 workers, adopted resolutions demanding that the present state government be swept out of office.

WAR DEAD COME HOME—During the last rites for 20 Pacific war heroes yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery, an unidentified woman kneels and bows her head over one of the coffins. Her gesture came at the very end of the services.

the band played "Nearer, My God to Thee."

The sun disappeared under a curtain of cloud, and a sharp, chilly breeze sprang up as the opening prayer was pronounced by Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller, Army Chief of Chaplains. Prayer services were also conducted by Catholic and Jewish chaplains. There was a hushed silence throughout the 25-minute service, except for the sobs of the mourning, and the drone of the single plane overhead.

There were three volleys by the firing party of seven soldiers and taps was sounded twice. Hatless and head bowed, President Truman stood for another moment, swept his eyes over the flower-banked casket and slowly walked away.

The flags, removed from the caskets, were presented by the honor guards to the bereaved families, who gathered in small groups around the graves of their dead. Some held family services. Masonic rites were conducted at the grave of Marine Sergt. Shelby L. Cox, 6106 First pl. nw.

Late in the afternoon, after the kinfolk of the dead had left, the 19 caskets and the wooden box were lowered into the graves and packed down with earth rushed up by a fleet of 10 trucks and covered with wreaths and flowers.

2 U. S. Officers Linked to Romanian Plot

Bucherest, Romania, Oct. 30 (AP). Defendant witnesses testified at the trial of Dr. Juliu Maniu today that two officers of the American Military Mission in Romania were in close contact with members of an underground movement aiming at the violent overthrow of the Communist-led government.

The witness said one of the officers threatened him with death if he "talked."

The trial of Maniu, 75-year-old Peasant Party leader, and his 18 alleged coconspirators began yesterday. Life imprisonment is the maximum penalty on conviction.

One of the accused, Ion De Mocsony-Styrcea, said the two American officers, Maj. Tom Hall and Lieut. Bill Hamilton, had smuggled two of the conspirators out of the country by plane as a result, Moscony said, the officers were immediately recalled from their posts by the American government.

Before Hall and Hamilton left Romania, Mocsony said, they summoned him to Bucharest and complained of "local indiscretions" which had led to their recall.

They pleaded with him to leave, but he refused, the witness said.

"Then Hall offered to give a friend of mine an envelope containing poison to keep in case I needed it," Mocsony continued. "I refused this, not wanting to drag others in. I told Hall that, if necessary, I could get my own poison."

Testifies of Threat

Thereupon, the witness claimed, Hall told him that if he talked there were other means besides poison to finish him off.

Mocsony told the court that the American officers had met the "conspirative group" through him. He had been King Mihal's private secretary until November, 1944, and in that capacity had met all officers of the American and British missions.

He described two alleged meetings between Hall and Hamilton and the conspirators. One meeting took place at the house of Mocsony's sister, he testified.

During these meetings a "memorandum" was drawn up, which laid down the principles for the organization of a secret resistance movement, and was later sent to Washington by the two officers, Mocsony said.

Mocsony said Hall and Hamilton had thought it would be safer for the leaders of the Romanian resistance movement to be out of the country, and so arranged the flight of two of the group, Grigore Nicolescu-Buzesti and Constantin Visoianu, both of whom are being tried in abstentia.

12,000 Coast Guardsme Eligible for Certificates

Admiral Joseph F. Farley, Coast Guard commandant, said yesterday that 12,000 veterans discharged from the Coast Guard since Pearl Harbor are eligible to receive honorable discharge certificates but have not applied for them.

The veterans were released with "ordinary discharges" or "discharges under honorable conditions because of physical disability, their own convenience to accept a commission or to become cadets.

They are entitled to all veterans' rights.

Anti-Russian Guerillas Put At 50,000

Munich, Germany, Oct. 30 (AP).—A former high-ranking Polish official now in exile says at least 50,000 anti-Communists are waging guerilla warfare with the Soviet army behind Russian lines in eastern Europe.

The former official, who would permit himself to be identified only as "Mr. G.," said the anti-Communist bands are led by a Ukrainian named Bendera on whose head the Russian secret police have put a fabulous price.

(A United States Army report released in Frankfurt in September said the Ukrainian resistance army fighting for Ukrainian independence was so large that units estimated to number 15,000 to 20,000 men had engaged Polish and Soviet Russian troops in pitched battles.)

Mr. G. told a fantastic story of strife within Russian-occupied territory, much of it stirred by the partisan Bendera whose followers are called the Enderovczi. Some of them lately have slipped over the border into the American zone of Germany, creating a ticklish problem for the United States constabulary.

"Bendera is one of two million Ukrainians who lived in Polish territory and had to leave Poland before the war for his leadership of Ukrainian separatists.

"He found protection in Germany and was financed by the Nazis. Bendera lost his love for the Germans when they occupied his native land.

"In 1942, Bendera went underground. It was only natural that at that time he was fully supported by the Russians."

When the Russians swept back into the Ukraine, Mr. G. related, Bendera had decided they were no better than the Nazis.

Mikolajczyk Abducted, Polish Writer Says

Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 30 (AP). A theory that Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, leader of the Polish Peasant Party, "has been abducted by the Russian political police" was advanced today by Tadeusz Norwid, noted Polish author living in Sweden.

Mikolajczyk and several supporters have not been seen since October 20. Norwid said he believed the former premier of the exiled Polish government had been "abducted during this trip without the knowledge of the Polish authorities."

Pair Given 7 Years For Safe Theft In Suitland

Two Baltimore men were sentenced to seven years each in the Maryland State Penitentiary in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday, for their part in theft of a safe containing about $2400 from a Suitland, Md., store May 30.

John Holman, 28, and Frank Coates, 27, were found guilty of storebreaking by a jury which deliberated about one hour after hearing testimony that the two were arrested only a short distance from a secluded wooded area in which the safe was found the day after the robbery. A third man, Clyde Barnes, arrested with the pair, is sought by Prince Georges police as a fugitive as the result of his failure to appear for the hearing after being freed under $1000 bond.

Send Bibles To Russians, Speaker Asks

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Dr. Rome A. Betts yesterday challenged America's Christians to get the Scriptures into Russian hands.

"If anyone is going to get Bibles into Russia, it will be the representatives of the Christian churches of America," Dr. Betts said at the annual luncheon meeting of the Washington City Bible Society in Barker Hall, YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Dr. Betts, one of the secretaries of the American Bible Society, New York City, told the clergymen and laymen from many churches that 15,000 New Testaments printed in Russian have been shipped to Russians in Korea, and that other Scriptures in Russian are being printed in the hope they can be sent to Russia.

Other speakers were Dr. Frederick A. Kropp, also an American Bible Society secretary; Captain John A. Moore, Navy chaplain, who was fleet chaplain for Admiral Chester Nimitz; Army Chaplain Matthew Imrie; Dr. Page McK. Etchison, president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, and Dr. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington City Bible Society.

Soviet Plans to Boycott U. N. Commission in Korea fruitless negotiations between the United States and Russia. The United States asked that the commission be established to "observe" the elections to take place before March 31, 1948, in both zones. After its establishment, troops of both countries would be withdrawn.

The Russians countered with demands that troops be withdrawn by the end of the year so that elections could be held without possible intimidation. She insisted also that Koreans from the north and south sit in on the discussions before the Assembly. This, many delegates objected, would cause the elections to be postponed for another year because there was no certainty who was truly a representative of the Koreans.

The United States asked that the commission be set up immediately to make sure that the Korean representatives "are not mere appointees from military authorities." The vote today approved that recommendation. An effort by Russia to "defer" further debate on the main issue was defeated 33 to 6.

John Foster Dulles of the United States read parts of an intercepted radio order for the opening of a Communist propaganda campaign in the American zone to show how "explosive" the situation is.

The order, numbered 342, was issued September 27 by the North Korean people's committee, a Soviet puppet party. It instructed "chiefs of provincial propaganda departments" in South Korea to publicize "three or four times in succession" Soviet proposals for withdrawal of troops. It ordered "report immediately" reactions to speeches made by Andre Vishinsky at the United Nations.

It also ordered "lecture committee members and propaganda workers to be given immediatly two-day lecture courses' and that they be sent to the provinces to spread the propaganda." It added:

"During past two years North Korea has trained people's leaders who are now capable and experienced through their struggles for national construction to establish a united democratic Korean government. Thsi is a focal point.

"Entire populace must be made to have confidence in North Korea . . ."

Other Developments

Other U. N. developments according to the United Press:

The United States tentatively offered U. N. an interest-free 65-million-dollar loan to build U. N.'s permanent headquarters in Manmattan. American Delegate Warren Austin said that after U. N. and the United States delegation worked out details, President Truman would ask Congress for the necessary approval. The loan would cover the entire cost of the headquarters, and probably would be amortized in 30 or 40 years out of members' contributions to U. N. expenses. The loan was deemed necessary because dollar-financed nations cannot pay in cash now.

The Economic Committee rejected, 24 to 6, a Yugoslav resolution leveled against American economic aid to Europe. The resolution demanded that relief supplies "at no time be used as a political weapon."

A subcommittee, completing watered-down plans for a year-round "Littl Assembly," voted to bar the group from tackling problems which the Security Council is studying. The plans also would require a two thirds vote for the "Little Assembly" to cover investigations.—Editor's note.)

Dean Named as Korea Military Governor

Seoul, Oct. 30 (AP).—Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, 48, who commanded the Forty-fourth Infantry Division in France, was named military governor of southern Korea today. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Archer L. Lerch, who died September 11.

No Overproduction Danger, Anderson Says

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 30 (AP).—Although American agriculture is experiencing a "revolutionary expansion of production," it has potential markets for the products of its entire acreage, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said today.

In a speech delivered before the annual convention of the National Reclamation Association, Anderson said that foreign and domestic demands likely will keep farmers "hustling to keep up for several years."

"It is up to us to conserve our resources that we may establish a permanent, productive agriculture, that we may accept the blessing of abundance and find ways of balancing that abundance with effective demand," he stated.

One big reason why more men wear Bond SUITS than any other SUITS in America!

Stop digging, mister! Give your battered bankroll a rest. It's a cinch—at Bond's. Just walk in, select your new suit—and pay not a cent more than you did last year. That's right—not a cent more for the same superior quality you've always associated with your Bond label. The same rich worsteds—America's finest. The same flawless needlework, the same smooth fit. How come this rare job of holding-the-line? Because making new friends—and keeping old ones—is always our No. 1 aim. And today, money talks! Keeping price down (without dropping a stitch of quality) is an old Bond custom. It never fails to pay handsome dividends to you—and to us. Drop in—let's show you what a swell set-up it is!

Marshall Planners Rule Nations Must 'Bank' Aid Sale Funds

would be fatal and might endanger the whole program.

It would put Americans in the position of being virtual minister of finance within 16 sovereign nations. There is no prospect whatever that Europeans would accept such a plan and, in fact, it has never been proposed by the Administration.

Self-Supervision Preferred

Officials here would prefer some collective supervision of the money by a continuing committee of the 16 European nations, perhaps with American representation on the group. One idea is to put these local currency proceeds into a special account in the Bank for International Settlements in Switzerland.

Then the funds could be released from time to time if the 16-nation committee approves. The conditions could be strictly set in prior agreements between the United States and the respective countries, but their supervision would have to be largely or entirely a matter for the Europeans themselves.

The setting aside of local currencies would be, in effect, a method of paying for American help by countries that cannot afford to pay in dollars. It would accomplish at least three things, in the opinion of those who support the idea:

1. It would prevent American aid from adding to inflation in the receiving countries; it would take out of general circulation the local currencies received from selling American food or raw material to the European consumers. Without some such scheme American aid would become a sort of international dole, ruinous alike to the self-respect and the internal financial stability of the receiving countries.

2. It would give a push to recovery and reconstruction projects in every receiving country, since local funds would be available to help finance them. In this way it would hasten the day when the European nations could become self-supporting—which is the chief object of the Marshall Plan.

3. It should ease the passage of at least the first year's appropriations for the Marshall Plan through Congress, since it would help to dispel the notion that the United States was scattering charity abroad.

May Ask Short Program

Much has been decided in the past two weeks of intensive planning within the Administration, but many troublesome issues are still unsettled.

There is wide agreement, for example, that Congress should be asked to approve only the first year of Marshall Plan costs and operations; that some new agency should be set up to administer the program; and that American aid must be on a courageous and generous scale if it is to put Europe back on its feet.

Officials are convinced that if Congress arbitrarily cuts the cost or imposes self-defeating restrictions, the whole program will become just another relief operation instead of a start toward genuine European recovery.

Dollar Use Debated

Among the unanswered questions is one that has baffled Administration officials all this week in many three and four-hour meetings. This is whether, and to what extent, the United States will provide dollars to buy supplies for Europe outside the United States.

The United States cannot possibly supply all the food and raw materials needed; much will have to come from Latin America. But the Latin Americans say, firstly, that they are already helping Europe with credits to individual countries like Italy; and secondly, that they must have dollars for any additional help.

Officials ask themselves whether an American farmer would let himself be taxed to buy food for Europe from a farmer in Brazil or Argentina—and perhaps at pric ; higher than the American farmer gets.

Colonial Trade Question

So far there has been no solution to this part of the "offshore purchasing" problem, as it is called in officials' jargon. Nor has it been decided whether countries in western Europe shall be allowed to trade some of their American supplies to eastern Europe, in return for desperately needed eastern European supplies like Polish coal.

Finally, nothing has been decided about supplies available within the colonial dependencies of the 16 European nations themselves. The East Indies, in spite of political turbulence, are estimated to be exporting about 25 per cent of their former huge exports of rubber, tin, petroleum, vegetable oils and other raw materials. British, French and Belgian colonies in Africa have still bigger resources and are not affected by political troubles.

Should these resources go in the first place to the European nations that are asking help from the United States? Or should the colonial powers be allowed to sell these supplies for dollars which would ease the European dollar position and hasten the recovery process?

If the colonial supplies cannot be sold for dollars, they could help Europe only if European currencies were made interchangeable, perhaps with the help of a three-billion-dollar stabilization fund of the sort that was discussed at Paris last summer. It is interlocking problems like this that baffle so many officials here, and make them feel sometimes that they are "meeting themselves coming home."

Marshall Visits President

Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Lovett visited President Truman yesterday, presumably to tell him of their progress and their perplexities. The President's advice will be decisive, for example, on how to present the European recovery program to Congress.

Such a mass of material is involved—including the European report and the reports of the President's three study committees—that its presentation will constitute a problem all its own.

Meantime the Administration's request for more than a billion dollars in stopgap aid and occupation costs is expected to come before the Budget Bureau this morning. This part of the program, at least, is in final shape as far as the executive departments are concerned. The next step is for the Budget Bureau to decide the exact amount that can be sought from Congress.

Va. Highway Conference Opens Today at VMI

Lexington, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—The first annual Virginia Highway Conference opens at Virginia Military Institute tomorrow with an expected 650 delegates attending to participate in discussion of mutual city, county, town and State road and street problems.

Representatives of the State Highway Department, jointly sponsoring the conference with the VMI Engineering School, met at Natural Bridge Hotel today to complete preliminary plans for the two-day event and to discuss various road problems expected to arise during the coming winter.

Three Children Suffocate Playing 'Jail' in Icebox

Danville, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Three little children, playing "jail" with a companion while their parents were away from home, died of suffocation today in their prison—an old wooden icebox.

Their 8-year-old captor whose twin brother was one of the victims, didn't suspect the danger until he returned after several hours and opened the icebox for a snack, Police Chief J. C. Garrett reported. The boy, James Clark, ran crying for help but rescuers found the children had been dead for some time.

The three were Mabel Ruth Clark, 5; Willie Lloyd Hairston, 3, and Samuel Clark, 8. The children were visiting the girl while their parents were out of town. Mabel's mother, Mamzell Clark, was at her work at a tobacco factory.

James Clark tearfully told police, Garrett said, that he slammed the doors shut on his friends but he was only "playing jail."

Missing Bormann's Son Is Found in Austria

Vienna, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Martin Bormann, jr., son of the missing former deputy leader of the Nazi Party, has been found living under an assumed name in the United States occupation zone of Austria, and has been arrested, American military intelligence disclosed today.

Despite three days of intensive interrogation, the 17-year-old son of Hitler's deputy fuehrer has not revealed anything that might lead to a new trail to his missing father, intelligence officials said.

Grain Export in High Gear

Paris cereals grain conference in July, shipments are being made early for stockpiling in needy countries abroad against the season of greatest demand—from May to August.

Announcement that the Government was back in the cash wheat market sent prices upwards for a time yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Heavy selling entered later, however, and prices again slumped, closing slightly below Wednesday's close. Corn was slightly higher.

Distribution Outlined

The extent and nature of the Government's food transactions were indicated in a statement from the Agriculture Department last night covering Government distribution of food, totaling 3074 million pounds, in September.

Food and agriculture commodities delivered to the War Department for Army feeding at home and abroad, and for civilian relief in occupied areas of Germany, Venezia-Giulia, Japan and the Ryukyus totaled 1144 million pounds. This included deliveries to the British zone in Germany paid for by the British Government.

Food shipped to cash-paying foreign governments totaled 875 million pounds. It included dried milk, dried eggs and grain.

Deliveries under the United States Foreign Relief program, for Greece, Italy, Trieste, Austria, Hungary, Poland and China, totaled 650 million pounds.

Deliveries to U. S. Agencies

Deliveries to Government agencies outside of the War Department, including Veterans' Administration, the Bureau of Prisons, Panama Canal and the National School program, were 32 million pounds. Another 372 million pounds were sold to individuals and corporations in the United States.

The food sales included 2605 million pounds of grain; dried milk 19 million pounds; evaporated milk 11 million; eggs 10½ million; fats and oils 25 million; vegetables, mainly potatoes, 397 million; canned fish 1 million; canned meat 1½ million; seeds 1 million; and juices, mainly for school lunches, 3 million.

Other Developments

Other developments on the food front yesterday included:

1. Government agencies, including the Internal Revenue Bureau and the Department of Agriculture, were searching for ways to coax grain supplies off the farm to meet export demands. George J. Schoeneman, internal revenue commissioner, admitted the bureau has "under study" a plan to let wheat farmers apply part of their 1947 receipts on 1948 incomes.

2. The Agriculture Department is studying plans to buy grain direct from farmers, thus by-passing grain exchanges. Such purchases would specify that payments would be made in 1948 and apply on 1948 incomes.

3. President Truman's Citizens Food Committee rejected a petition from the Turkey Growers Association to exempt turkeys from Poultryless Thursdays. The committee said the food conservation program already has been modified to sanction turkey menus on three Thursday holidays, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, and that "no further modification appears advisable."

Substitute Plan Proposed for Md. Sales Tax

Hyman Pressman, Baltimore attorney and foe of Maryland's sales tax, outlined Wednesday a program which he said would permit repeal of the sales tax.

Pressman spoke at a meeting sponsored by the Prince Georges County Anti-Sales Tax Committee in the National Guard Armory at Hyattsville. He said his plan would bring the State more than 18 million dollars annually, the same as the sales tax, without increasing the individual tax.

His program would include, he said, a 50 per cent increase in gross receipts taxes on public utilities and 1½ to 3 per cent increase in capital income taxes and 1 to 6½ per cent in inheritance taxes. It also included use of State excess funds.

..HADDOCK is the answer..

In these days of vital grain conservation you can co-operate with the President's Program pleasurably by eating fish, particularly HADDOCK FILLETS.

The HADDOCK is the best known and the BEST of all varieties of FISH caught in the cold waters of the North Atlantic. In its filleted form, clean slices of meat free from bones, it is in great demand all over these United States. Like Beef, it can be eaten as a steady part of your diet, without losing its wonderful taste and appeal.

And just like Beef, there are various grades of Haddock: "choice," "good" and "commercial." Try GOLD BOND HADDOCK FILLETS for a real "choice" brand. No finer HADDOCK FILLET can be bought anywhere at any price.

'One-Bite' Aid Action Favored known that the House Foreign Economic Committee is considering a plan to vest control of foreign aid in a new Government corporation, independent of the State Department.

A top administration would be in over-all charge not only of aid to the 16 European countries, but assistance rendered China, Korea and other countries. Only link with the State Department would be through an advisory council, headed by Secretary of State Marshall. The new agency would screen requirements of the countries needing assistance and direct buying of commodities and allocating for export.

This is very much like the independent aid agency Taft has in mind.

Jap Reparations Claims Estimated At $54 Billions

By The Associated Press

Initial reparations claims filed by 11 Pacific allies against Japan were reported yesterday, on the basis of one key estimate, to add up to approximately 54 billion dollars.

An authoritative official source said the claims, submitted to the 11-nation Far Eastern Commission here, was topped by a demand from China that she be allotted 40 per cent of the total indemnities exacted from Japan for war losses.

The claims, disclosed only in percentages, came to light following a session yesterday of the Far Eastern Commission.

The commission, it was disclosed at the same time, has been striving for the last eight months to scale down the claims but has not reached agreement.

The size of the Japanese reparations pool on which tentative calculations of the Far Eastern Commission were based has not been revealed, but the percentage claims suggested the amount was around 14 billion dollars.

Cabbie Convicted In $3000 Theft From Fare's Purse

A District Court jury yesterday deliberated four hours to convict a 29-year-old cab driver of taking $3000 from a purse which a passenger had left in his taxi.

He was Louis W. Jernigan of 3717 Kansas ave. nw., who was found guilty of grand larceny.

Mrs. Hazel Wilson of the Cavalier Apartments, 3500 14th st. nw., testified that she left a purse containing the $3000 and about $1000 worth of jewelry in the taxi.

Date for sentencing was not set.

Playground Develops Big Mud Hole

Students at the Petworth Elementary School, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw., Wednesday found that their playgsound had developed a big water hole.

They had a fine time splashing around in the water and tracking mud into the schoolhouse.

Following Tuesday's heavy rains water drained off a recently asphalted section of the playground on to a lower dirt filled portion forming a pool several inches deep.

Mrs. Lillian Winegard, president of the Petworth School P-TA, said that the parents are distressed by the half-finished condition of the playground.

In addition to having poor drainage it is dangerous for small children, she said.

Howard P. Safford, associate superintendent of District schools in charge of buildings and grounds, told The Washington Post last night that he had received a protest from the P-TA about the condition of the playground but had not had a chance to look into it.

The office of Archie Hutson, superintendent of construction for the District, was in charge of the resurfacing, he said.

GI Bond-Cashing Aids in Record Of Dollar Sales

Boosted by cashing of GI terminal leave bonds, the dollar volume of retail sales reached the highest level in history during September, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

It placed September sales at $9,285,000,000, about 13 per cent above the same month last year and, after seasonal adjustments, 5 per cent above August and 3 per cent above the previous high set in June.

The department's index of retail sales showed the September intake as 188 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

Denazification Chief Breaks With Reds

Munich, Germany, Oct. 30 (AP).—Heinrich Schmitt, first Bavarian Minister of Denazification, said today he had broken with the Communist Party after 27 years of membership.

"I canceled my membership because I am opposed to the idea of implanting Russian conditions in Germany," he said. "I am and I always shall be a Marxist, but I think what is good for Russia is not necessarily good for other countries."

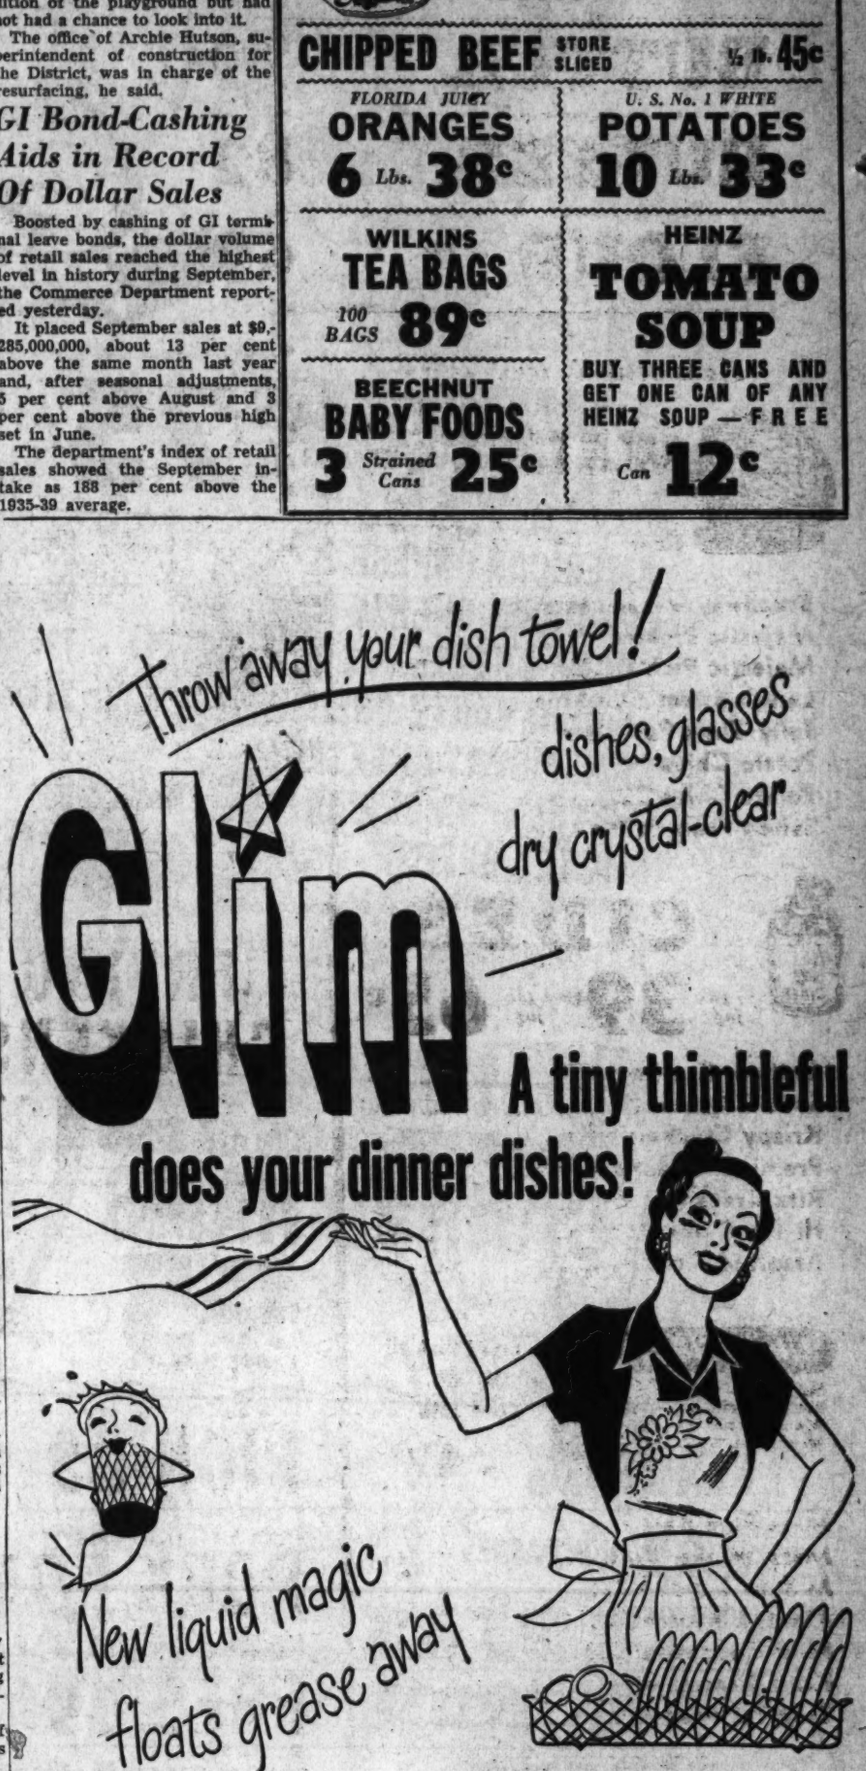
dishes, glasses dry crystal-clear

A tiny thimbleful does your dinner dishes!



New liquid magic floats grease away

Cuts grease faster than soap!
Glim surrounds grease, cuts it away clean as a whistle. Pots and pans, dishes shine. Even sticky egg smears disappear fast.

Speed-cleans dishes—beats soap by a mile!
Glim gobbles up the dirt, makes rinsing easier. You save on dish towels because dishes, pots and pans, drain spotlessly dry. And no sticky dishpan ring to scrub!

Dishes sparkle—no soap film!
No soap leaves glasses, silver so dazzling. Every dish shines like new—free from soapy streaks. Glim, the new dishwashing wonder, cleans completely!

Leaves hands feeling surgically clean!
Glim leaves hands cleaner than ever before. Yet no soap made—powder, flake or bar—is safer, gentler, or milder to hands. Unlike soap, Glim contains no harsh alkali. In tests with eleven leading soap and soapless dishwashers, only Glim proved 100% non-irritating to all types of skin.

Suds faster than soap!
No stubborn soap particles to dissolve. For instant suds in hard or soft, hot or cold water—pour Glim into dishpan. Add water full force. Glim keeps on cleaning even after suds have dissolved!

Soviet Spy Tried to Contact Atom Scientist, Hearing Told

ately to clean its own house and not wait for public opinion to force it to do so."

For days the chairman had promised a "surprise" witness would turn up with "sensational" testimony about atom bomb spying. Russell turned out to be the witness. A member of the committee's investigating staff, he had been on the stand at least 11 times before.

Russell's Story

Nobody on the staff could explain what it had to do with the committee's inquiry into communism in Hollywood, but this is how the spying story was told by Russell:

George Charles Eltenton, who worked for the Shell Development Corp. of Emeryville, Calif., as late as July, 1046, once lived in Russia near Leningrad, learned the language, and translated some Russian books into English. One was by a Russian scientist who was a friend of another scientist who developed Russia's first atom-smashing machine.

In 1942, Peter Ivanov, vice consul and secretary at the Soviet consulate in San Fransieso, offered to pay Eltenton to obtain information regarding "highly secret work" at the University of California's radiation laboratory at Berkeley.

Eltenton got in touch with Haakon Chevalier, a professor at the university, and asked him to find out what was being done at the radiation laboratory, particularly with "the highly destructive weapon" that was under development. Eltenton told Chevalier Russia was entitled to such information as a wartime ally.

Chevalier approached Oppenheimer and told him Eltenton had a "source" through which he (Eltenton) could relay information to the Soviet government.

Oppenheimer told Chevalier this was a "treasonable act and he wouldn't have anything to do with it."

Oppenheimer later was in charge of development of the atom bomb at Los Alamos, N. Mex.

Russell said Ivanov is back in Russia.

Possible Hook-up

There was just one possible hook-up with Hollywood:

Russell said that Mrs. Louise Branster, former wife of Bruce Minton, culture editor of the New Masses, directed the "manner in which contacts" would be made by Communists. He said she had contacts with numerous Government agencies and people in Hollywood.

Mrs. Bransten entertained Eltenton and his wife at a party in 1944, Russell said, and later tried to get Mrs. Eltenton a job. Eltenton, he said, told Mrs. Bransten he was "trying to educate a certain scientist along particular lines."

Russell said he had the name of the scientist.

Committee authorities said the FBI had approved ahead of time the release of all the information Russell poured out today. They said the FBI turned the same information over to the Justice Department a year ago for possible action.

Russell testified that Mrs. Bransten, a woman of considerable wealth inherited from her father, teamed up with Charles A. Page in a campaign to buy Gerhard Eisler out of a concentration camp in France in 1940. Gerhard Eisler has been identified by the committee as the "supreme" Communist authority in the United States.

Page, Russell said, was employed by the State Department from about 1928 to 1933, then as a freelance writer in Hollywood from 1934 to 1941, and again at the State Department after that. Page has since left the State Department.

Page, Russell said, was in contact with Chevalier, Vassili Zubilin, Herbert Biberman, John Howard Lawson, Otto Katz and Gerhard Eisler and his brother, Hanns, a Hollywood musician.

"Sought OWI Job"

The committee investigators said that through Robert E. Sherwood, Page tried and failed to get Chevalier a job with the Office of War Information.

At that point, there was no identification of any of those named.

In 1943, Russell testified, the Soviet government sent Mixhail Kalatozov to Hollywood as an "official representative."

At a time when attempts were being made to "spring" Earl Browder, former head of the Communist Party, out of prison, Russell said, one Alexander Stevens went to Hollywood. One or another of a series of meetings with Stevens on May 3, 1942, he said, were attended by: Waldo Salt, Paul Jarrico, Morton Grant, Robert Rossen, Vera Harris, Lester Cole, Herbert Biberman, Madeline Ruthven and Hertz Uerkvitz.

LOUIS J. RUSSELL
"Surprise witness"

Stripling said the committee has been trying to subpena Stevens for some time, that he was arrested about three weeks ago in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and that the committee has "evidence that for years he has been the head of the underground section of the Communist Party."

Under the name of Isadore Boorstein, Stripling said, Stevens used a fraudulent passport to go to Russia in 1931.

Louise Bransten, Russell said, now is the wife of Lionel Berman of New York. He said she made big contributions to Communist causes and gave a dinner in May, 1945, for Dmitri Manuilsky. At that time, Manuilsky was head of the Ukrainian delegation to the United Nations Conference in San Francisco.

The committee investigator entered a number of other names into the record, but did not say what many of them had to do with the investigation of Hollywood.

Only "First Phase"

As Thomas banged his gavel for the last time, he said that only the "first phase" of the inquiry is over.

"While we have heard 39 witnesses," he said, "there are many more to be heard. I stated earlier in the meeting that I would present the records of 79 prominent people associated with the motion picture industry who were members of the Communist Party or who had extensive records of Communist affiliation.

"We have had before us 11 of these individuals; there are 68 to go."

When the hearings get going again, he said, they will deal with propaganda in films and also will give more people a chance to confirm or deny Communist affiliations.

9 Cited in Contempt

In addition to Cole and Lardner, the committee started contempt proceedings against writers John Howard Lawson, Dalton Trumbo, Alvah Bessie, Albert Maltz and Samuel Ornitz; writer-producer-director Herbert Biberman; director Edward Dmytryk and producer Adrian Scott.

Since only three of the nine committee members have been on hand, the full committee still must vote to bring contempt citations against the witnesses. Eventually the cases could reach a Federal Court, where convictions would carry punishments of as much as a year in jail and a $1000 fine.

Testimony regarding some of those against whom the contempt actions have been begun came from such movie stars as Adolph Menjou and Robert Taylor. The committee also heard Actors Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery, Ronald Reagan and George Murphy. It listed them as what it called "friendly" witnesses.

Actors Charlie Chaplin and Larry Parks were subpenaed but never were called to the stand.

Interpreter Trouble

By the time the committee got around to the last contempt proceedings against Lardner and Cole, it was operating with something of a "ho hum" attitude.

Lardner converted the book "Forever Amber" into a screen play. He also turned out scripts for such films as the "Cross of Lorraine," "Cloak and Dagger," and "Woman of the Year."

Cole wrote such movies as "Blood on the Sun" and "None Shall Escape."

For Brecht, the committee supplied an interpreter from the Library of Congress. Spectators chortled when the interpreter, David Baumgardt, had an accent almost as thick as the witness'. Thomas complained:

"I can't understand the interpreter."

The 19 "unfriendly witnesses," 10 of whom have been cited for contempt by the subcommittee, last night issued a statement charging the committee with attempting to dictate to Hollywood.

"The Thomas committee," the group said, "prematurely folded its tents with final control of the motion picture industry still unachieved but it will not silently steal way. In his summation Chairman J. Parnell Thomas left the threat of further investigation of scripts and individuals still hanging over the industry."

Brewster to Ask Probe of Oil Deals

Legality of Arabian-American Ownership By 4 Competitors Questioned by Senator

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said yesterday he would ask the Attorney General to check on legality of ownership of Arabian-American Oil Co. by four competing firms.

Brewster, chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, raised the question of a possible violation of the antitrust laws in the deal. His statement followed testimony of W. S. S. Rodgers, chairman of the Texas Co., before the committee that Arabian-American probably would continue to sell oil in Europe although it could market its product here considerably under prevailing prices.

Brewster quoted from a 1942 court decision which he said made it an antitrust violation for oil companies to "curtail, restrict and limit" exports and imports.

In later questioning of Rodgers, Brewster brought out that sale of part of Arabian-American just two days before announcement of the Truman Doctrine was "pure coincidence." Rodgers said he was "amazed" when the Truman Doctrine was announced immediately after the sale and added that he had heard officers of Standard Oil also were "amazed."

Clark Notified of Deal

Arabian Oil originally was owned by the Texas Co. and Standard Oil of California, which sold part interest to Socony Vacuum and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

As to the legality of the deal, Rodgers said it had been brought to the attention of Attorney General Clark, who found no objection.

James Terry Duce, vice president of Arabian-American, told the committee his company sold crude oil to France at 95 cents a barrel at the same time it was selling the same oil to the United States Navy at $1.05 a barrel for distribution in France through UNRRA. He explained that was a "spot cargo" shipped to Marseilles "to see if we could sell more." Then, under further questioning, he said 120,000 tons had been sold to France at 90 cents a barrel.

"You've got a lot of explaining to do about that," roared Brewster.

"You sold to commercial firms in France at 90 cents and were selling to your own government at $1.05 after it had put in 80 million dollars to save your hide."

A "Commercial Deal"

Duce explained that the oil sold directly to France was considered a "commercial deal," whereas the company felt funds paid by the United States would be returned through lend-lease.

That explanation brought only a derisive snort from Brewster.

Duce maintained that in all his company's dealings with the Navy, the price was equal to, or lower than, the average price on the United States Gulf Coast.

The committee is holding hearings on charges of former Arabian-American official James A. Moffett that the United States lost something like 30 million dollars by failing to take advantage of his offer in 1941 of oil at 40 cents a barrel. Rodgers contended yesterday that despite the difference between that price and the $1.05 actually paid three years later, the Government got a "square deal."

In a huddle with Brewster after the hearing, Charles Evans Hughes, jr., counsel for the oil companies, vigorously protested Brewster's threat to bring in the Department of Justice. He contended any antitrust phase of the case was beyond the committee's jurisdiction.

"The scope of a congressional committee is broad," Brewster said. "When we see what appears to be a violation of the law we go into it."

"That's a matter for the Attorney General and the courts," retorted Hughes. He contended the resolution setting up the committee limited it to investigating fraud, graft or corruption in war contracts.

Shipping Firms Fear Strikes From Court Action on Pay

By The Associated Press

The shipping industry declared yesterday that court action involving "overtime on overtime" pay for longshoremen may lead to "crippling" maritime strikes and 260 million dollars added Government costs.

Walter E. Maloney, representing the National Federation of American Shipping, Inc., told a House Labor Subcommittee the problem is so acute "its impact may be felt throughout industry in general." He said the federation speaks for 90 per cent of American-owned ocean-going tonnage.

Four major stevedore concerns on the East and West Coasts joined Maloney in filing statements asking Congress to exempt night and holiday pay premiums paid to longshoremen from being calculated as part of regular pay rates subject to overtime under the Wage-Hour Act.

They pointed out that a United States Circuit Court has held that the premium rates are part of regular pay. The Supreme Court has been asked to review this decision.

"To the best of my knowledge," Maloney said, "there is not a single stevedore (firm) in this country who has escaped these lawsuits.

"There is not a single one who has any hope of avoiding receivership if these claims are successful. The collective assets of the stevedoring industry would be but a small fraction of the gross amounts of the claims."

The Wage-Hour Law requires payment of time and a half the regular rate of pay for all hours worked beyond 40 a week. However, union contracts long have required stevedore concerns to pay longshoremen time and a half for all hours worked (1) beyond eight a day, (2) before 8 a. m. or after 5 p. m., or (3) on Saturday, Sunday or holidays.

Charles H. Bayly, president of the Crescent Wharf and Warehouse Co., Los Angeles, Calif., said in his statement:

"We were dumfounded when suits were brought against us claiming that the overtime rates we have paid for years were not overtime rates at all. The union now claimed these were merely different rates of pay for straight time.

"They demanded straight time and overtime and, in addition, overtime on overtime for all hours in excess of 40."

Maloney said that if the cases succeeded the Government faces an additional 260 million dollar charge for its wartime shipping operations and stevedores will be "forced" to eliminate daily overtime and other premium payments from longshore contracts.

"You know as well as I," he added, "that an attempt to take away from organized labor the favorable overtime provisions which now exist in their contracts will result in industry-wide, crippling strikes."

Production of A-Bomb Hindered by Ohio Strike

Galion, Ohio, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—An official of the strike-bound North Electric Co. charged at the opening session of a congressional subcommittee hearing today that the strike was holding up atom bomb production.

R. K. McBerty, vice president of the firm and first witness called by the committee, said the Galion plant was "producing remote control equipment for the atom bomb and production is being held up by the strike."

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.), decided to look into the tense labor situation here after violence flared at the plant here and another company plant in Kenton, Ohio.

Machinery Destroyed

A United Auto Workers witness at the hearing countered McBerty's assertions with the charge that telephone wires had been tapped on union calls. Hoffman ruled out that line of testimony, however.

McBerty said the Galion plant recently completed a 3000-line switchboard for an atom bomb plant, and that a 4000-line board was now in production. "The Government has made a demand on us that we get this equipment out," he said.

"The Kenton plant is down due to destruction of machinery. I am not saying who is responsible for the destruction. The only persons who would benefit by the act were those conducting the strike," McBerty said.

Home-made Bombs Found

The Kenton plant was entered two weeks ago by masked men who overpowered a guard and destroyed valuable machinery. McBerty said three home-made bombs had been found in the plant and had been turned over to law enforcement officials for fingerprint tests.

Edward J. Duck, international representative for the UAW-CIO, made the telephone-tapping charges.

Hoffman replied: "We are not interested in that now. We'll get to that angle later. What we want now is a record of telephone calls made by the union."

3 Distillers to Keep Men During Holiday

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Joseph O'Neill, general president of the Distillery Workers Union, announced today three distilling concerns agreed to maintain all his union's members during the 60-day production holiday, with no downgrading in pay.

The two-months' shutdown of the distilling industry was requested by Charles Luckman's Food Conservation Committee to save grains for European relief.

Five other distilleries, O'Neill said, "will notify us of their intentions within 48 hours."

Domino Sugar recipe for hallowe'en!

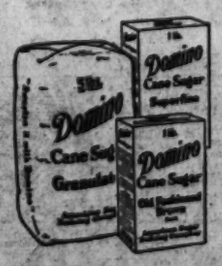
2¼ cups sifted flour
½ tsp. salt
3 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. nutmeg
2 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup DOMINO Old Fashioned Brown Sugar
½ cup milk
2 tbsps. melted butter
DOMINO Superfine Sugar

• Mix and sift flour, salt, baking powder and nutmeg. Add sugar to the egg yolks and beat until fluffy. Stir in milk and melted butter. Add flour and beat until smooth. Turn on very well floured board, working in just enough flour so dough may be rolled. Pat with a rolling pin until ¼ inch thick and cut with a small doughnut or biscuit cutter which has been dipped in flour. Fry in deep hot fat (385° F.)—turning often until tender golden brown. Drain on soft paper—sprinkle with Superfine sugar.

satin taffy

2 cups DOMINO Granulated Sugar
1 cup water
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 tsp. vanilla extract

• Mix sugar, water and vinegar in saucepan and stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Cover and bring to boil. Uncover, and cook without stirring to 268° F., or until a hard ball will form when syrup is tried in very cold water. Add vanilla extract and pour into two greased 8-inch pans. Set pans in cold water until edges of syrup crinkle and the candy is cool enough to be handled. Pull it until white and firm. Cut into one-inch pieces with scissors wet in cold water. The pieces may be wrapped in waxed paper. About one pound.



• Treat your folks to a Hallowe'en party—with plenty of good things to eat—and made with delicious DOMINO Sugars! They're plentiful now in all varieties!

Thomas Group Dodged Truth, Mellett Says

Formr White House Aide Lowell Mellett yesterday accused the House Un-American Activities Committee of "cowardice" for breaking off its hearing on Hollywood communism without giving him a chance to testify.

Mellett said the committee twice promised him a chance to deny personally that he played any part in M-G-M's decision to produce the movie "Song of Russia" starring Robert Taylor.

Several months ago, after a closed hearing in Hollywood, the committee said Taylor had been high-pressured by Mellett, against his own convictions, to make the picture. Taylor denied that when he came here to testify last week.

The committee, said Mellett, "deliberately avoided letting me give them the truth."

Passed Along Request

Mellett, now a newspaper columnist, was a wartime official of the Office of War Information as well as an assistant to the late President Roosevelt.

Mellett said he met Taylor in Hollywood before the controversial picture was completed, but that they did not discuss it at that time.

Two months later, he said in a statement, MGM Director Gregory Ratoff came to his office in Washington, outlined the picture and told him that Taylor was about to take a commission in the Navy, leaving the picture unfinished.

Mellett said he passed on to the Navy Ratoff's request that Taylor be permitted to finish "Song of Russia" before starting his Navy training.

Charges Smear

The request was granted and Taylor finished the picture, which he has since criticized as a pro-Soviet film which "would not be made now."

Mellett was sharply critical of the committee's earlier charge that he went to Hollywood on orders from Elmer Davis, then chief of the Office of War Information, "to see that Haylor played that leading role."

"The statement," he said . . . "could only be intended to smear Mr. Davis or the memory of President Roosevelt."

Harvard Luncheons

The Harvard Club of Washington next week will resume its luncheon meetings, which will be held this year at the Hotel Lafayette. The first meeting will be at 12:30 p. m. on November 8, with the speaker to be announced. Dr. William E. Eaton, 1627 33d st. nw., secretary, will receive reservations.

Hughes Plane Test Tomorrow

Los Angeles, Oct. 30 (AP).—Howard Hughes announced today his 200-ton flying boat—subject of a congressional inquiry reopening Monday—will leave its dock for the first time for water tests Saturday.

The multimillionaire plane maker, oil operator and movie producer declined any statement beyond the announcement that tractors and tugs will haul the giant plane with its 320-foot wingspread, out for the first time Saturday and that on Sunday he will cruise around the harbor on taxi tests.

"It should be made clear," said a spokesman, "that the ship will not fly for months, probably not until next spring. The taxi tests will be to determine its airflow, water characteristics and to accumulate other necessary data. Actually, flying the flying boat will be like learning to fly al over again. In addition to its size, its plot must accustom himself to its remote control operation, which involves a small time lag from the moment he touches the controls."

Man Who Jumped From Bridge Ruled Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterdoy by the Coroner's office in the death of Bernard W. Davis, 29, of Fairfax, Va.

Davis's body was found in the Potomac River Wednesday after he leaped from the Memorial Bridge. His wife, Katherine L. Davis, identified the body.

U. S. to Take Stand On Realty Ban Against Negroes

The Government is going to take a stand on deeds which say houses are not to be sold or rented to Negroes or other minority groups.

There are many signs that the Justice Department will tell the Supreme Court such "restrictive covenants" are against the public policy.

The deeds are under fire in four cases that are before the Justices now and are due to be argued early in December.

Among other things, the justices have been told that the Government declared against such deeds by signing the United Nations charter and the Act of Chapultepec.

The suits are all between private persons. First word that the Government will take part came yesterday, when Attorney General Tom C. Clark told his press conference he was going to file a brief in the four cases. He said that he could not speak of the merits, because the cases still were before the court.

White House Aide Shuns Loyalty Test

Consultant to Truman Council Refuses To Fill Out Forms, Calls Order 'Repugnant'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Colston E. Warne, professor of economics at Amherst College and unpaid consultant to the President's Council of Economic Advisers, announced yesterday that he was refusing to fill out Federal "loyalty test" questionnaires.

He made his position known in a long letter, with a full head of steam sustained throughout, to Council Chairman Edwin G. Nourse.

Warne said he was not a Communist, never had been, and had no associations which he wanted to hide. In fact, he added, his fingerprints and all the information requested were already on file in the Government. But, he declared, he considered the forms as "an intrusion upon personal liberties."

The loyalty tests, directed by President Truman in an executive order aimed at preventing the Federal employment of subversive persons, were characterized by Warne as "blundering in conception and dangerous in execution."

Warne's letter was not a resignation. He stated at a press conference that the next move was up to Dr. Nourse. But he assumed that his position was terminated. It involved quarterly meetings with the council and its staff, but no recompense other than travel reimbursement and a small per diem allowance for expenses.

In a statement, he said he could not "cooperate in the witch-hunting which has become the sport of Washington today."

He told newsmen he was opposed to the whole concept of the Government seeking to inquire into the political desires of its employes, and, secondarily, to the methods and techniques contemplated under the present loyalty tests and trial procedure.

He said he felt that even Communists, as citizens, have a right to the fullest possible expression of their ideas. If any individual sought to overthrow the Constitution, he argued, he should be prosecuted through the courts, under the guarantees of a fair trial.

"I cannot submit to the idea that either the President or the House Un-American Committee has any power or any capacity to lay down standards of loyalty," he said.

His action followed closely a warning this week of the President's Committee on Civil Rights of possible abuses in the loyalty test procedures. It said the Government's acts on this line could lead to dangerous "Red-hunting."

Warne has been a frequent consultant to Government agencies in the past several years. He is a registered Democrat. He has headed the Consumers Union since 1936 and is a member of the Board of the Civil Rights Congress.

His Letters to Nourse

He wrote Nourse:

"This executive order (requiring the loyalty forms) is so completely repugnant to the political institutions of our country that I cannot comply with its terms . . . My refusal . . . is based solely on principle.

"Although the President has indicated his opposition to price control because it is evidence of a police state, he apparently fails to recognize that loyalty orders such as the one he has promulgated are the requisite concomitants of all police states. . . .

"I am indeed shocked that for the first time in American history heresy hunting has received sanction of the President of the United States."

Russian Seizure Of Austrian Oil Protested by U. S.

The State Department yesterday accused Russia of violating the property rights of American citizens through the seizure of British and American-owned oil refinery property in the Soviet zone of Austria.

The department instructed Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith to file a formal protest with the Moscow government against the seizure of the Lobau Oil Refinery last August.

Previously, American representatives on the Austrian Treaty Commission and in the Allied Control Council at Vienna had protested the seizure.

The Lobau property was described by Press Officer Michael McDermott as being owned by the American firm, Socony Vacuum, and the British Shell Co. through their wholly-owned German subsidiaries.

"We hold that the seizure constitutes a violation of the property rights of American citizens," McDermott told reporters.

With the Fine Flavor of Blue Plate Mayonnaise

SARDINE SANDWICH FILLING
—with fresh, FRESH Blue Plate Mayonnaise
1 small can sardines (in oil)
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Pinch of salt
2 tablespoons Blue Plate Mayonnaise

Remove skin and bones from sardines; break up with a fork and mix thoroughly with Blue Plate Mayonnaise and other ingredients. (You'll like the fine flavor Blue Plate Mayonnaise adds to sandwiches. It's seasoned to be just sweet enough—just tart enough. And made with the finest salad oil, blended vinegars, selected eggs, and spices.) This recipe makes filling for 4 to 5 sandwiches.

2000 India Troops Fight For Lives

New Delhi, Oct. 30 (AP).—Two battalions of army troops from the Dominion of India were reported in danger of being lost today in the fight to save Kashmir, border state, from what a competent informant said was an invasion hatched in Moslem Pakistan.

Kashmir, predominantly Moslem state ruled by a Hindu Maharajah, and surrounded by Russia, Tibet, Afghanistan, Chinese Turkistan, Pakistan and India, suddenly joined Hindu India on a provisional basis last weekend, in a bid for protection against the invasion by irregulars from Pakistan.

The informant said Pakistan had started a brigade of regular troops to Kashmir last weekend, but had withdrawn them when warned by Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck, India's British commander-in-chief, that an accidental clash with Indian troops would mean "war between the dominions."

Parley Called at Lahore

(The Ministry of Commonwealth Relations in London announced that the Prime Ministers and governors general of India and Pakistan had been summoned to a conference at Lahore, India, for Saturday when they would be called upon to settle "grave" problems.)

The two Sikh battalions flown into the beleaguered state were reported by a competent authority to be battling desperately against superior numbers and firepower, after a retreat which one source said was to within 10 miles of Srinagar, Kashmir capital.

The New Delhi Statesman's correspondent said the raiders had captured Gulmarg, holiday resort near Srinagar, and burned the Maharajah's palace there.

Planes Commandeered

The India government tonight canceled the services of most of its civil airlines and commandeered the planes in order to rush more men and materials to Kashmir.

Plans also were being hurried to move heavier weapons and more men in through the one passable road from India by way of Pathankot and Kashmir's Jammu Province. The other roads are via Pakistan.

It was disclosed also that troops have been sent to Jammu.

An India defense ministry communique tonight confirmed that the Sikhs had lost their commander, Lieut. Col. D. R. Rai.

3000 Invading Force

The informant said the invading force was made up of 2500 to 3000 Mahsud and Afridi tribesmen, Moslem Leaguers and former soldiers from Pakistan's northwest frontier force, who were being reinforced by new arrivals from over the frontier, and who were well supplied with modern arms, including machineguns, mortars, howitzers, artillery and vehicles.

About 2000 Sikh troops have been flown in to fight beside Kashmir state troops, who originally numbered nearly 10,000, he said.

"This is an organized thing of which we have unimpeachable evidence," he said. "They are trying to encircle Srinagar from three directions. Their military strategy is good. Our two battalions may be lost."

Rev. W. J. Elliott Leaves St. Paul Methodist

The transfer of the Rev. William J. Elliott from the pulpit of the St. Paul Methodist Church, 13th and Crittenden sts. nw., to First Church, Cumberland, Md., was announced last night by Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, of the Washington, area.

Mr. Elliott will end his local pastorate this Sunday. Dr. Chesteen Smith, a retired Methodist cleric and former pastor of Hamline Church here, will serve the St. Paul Church until a pastor is appointed.

New Governor Of Oregon

French Dedicate Memorial to U. S. Nisei Unit

Bruyeres, France, Oct. 30 (AP).—The entire population of this little Vosges mountain town attended the dedication today of a French-American monument to the World War heroism of Americans of Japanese descent.

Three years to the day after the 442d Combat Team—half of its members volunteers from Hawii—rescued a United States First Division battalion entrapped by Germans in the Vosges hills—the monument was erected proclaiming that "Loyalty to one's country is not modified by racial origin."

The monument was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hall, on behalf of the Japanese-American Citizens League. The Halls until recently were of the Associated Press bureau at Salt Lake, where the league has its headquarters.

20.8% of Americans Moved in 7-Year Period

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the past seven years was one of the "moving around-est" periods in American history.

Of the 122,633,000 civilians over seven years old last April, it said, fully 25,469,000—20.8 per cent—moved out of their original counties in the period between April, 1940, and April, 1947.

The bureau said the war and the reconversion era were responsible.

Bodies of Snell, Aides Recovered in Oregon

Klamath Falls, Oreg., Oct. 30 (AP).—Oregon's Governor, two top aides and their pilot were found dead today on a crash-scarred butte and were borne out on pine-bough litters along a path hacked through the forest.

The wreckage of the most tragic plane crash in Oregon history was reached this morning at the base of a cliff into which the private plane ploughed on a hunting trip Tuesday night.

The dead are Governor Earl Snell, 52; State Senate President Marshall Cornett, 49, next in line on succession for the governorship; Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell, jr., 41; and Cliff Hogue, 41, pilot.

Three bodies lay in the unburned wreckage, below the timbered cliff in Green Valley, about 70 miles east of here near the California border. The fourth was thrown clear.

A convoy of State police escorted the stretchers over a trail opened for them by axe-bearing rescuers. Forest service trucks carried the bodies to the Dog Lake guard station, and transferred the stretchers to ambulances for the trip here.

Searchers came across the wreckage this morning after a night-long hunt in the rain-drenched, rugged country about 3 miles west of Dog Lake.

The grim confirmation, expected since the wreckage was glimpsed from the air late yesterday afternoon, cut a deep gap in Oregon's political life.

John H. Hall, 48, Portland attorney, rose from a sick bed to hurry to the State Capitol in Salem to take the oath of office as Governor. Hall, as speaker of the House of Representatives, automatically succeeds to the governorship now that both Snell and Cornett are dead.

Just before the fatal plane trip, a reporter asked Governor Snell if he were not afraid of flying. Governor Snell raised his right hand and joked: "My mark isn't up yet."

The Governor's party was en route from here to Warner Valley for a morning of goose and duck hunting.

Bomber With 5 Aboard Crashes and Explodes

March Field, Calif., Oct. 30 (AP). An A-26 attack bomber with five men aboard crashed and exploded in the San Bernardino mountains north of Fontana, apparently soon after its takeoff from here yesterday, the Army Public Information Office announced today. It was headed for Burbank.

Fisherman Finds Body on Shore

The body of an unidentified white man about 45 to 50 years old was found on the east shore of Kingman Lake near the Pepco Benning plant by a fisherman about 5 p. m. yesterday.

Robert Buchanan, 47, 709 Kenilworth ter. ne., told police that he saw the body lying just above the low-tide mark about 600 yards north of the Benning Road Bridge as he was looking for a place to fish. Police said that the body was decomposed and had been in the water at least three weeks.

The man was clothed in a dark jacket, khaki trousers, low brown shoes and blue striped shorts, they said.

Tibetan Expert Feared Slain, Wife Escapes

New Delhi, Oct. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Theos Bernard of New York and Santa Barbara, Calif., who fled on foot 128 miles from tribal raiders in isolated Kulu Valley in the northern Punjab, said today her husband—a scholar of Tibetan lore—was missing and probably killed.

Bernard

Mrs. Bernard said there was still hope her 40-year-old husband had escaped raiders who, shepherds said, attacked his party.

No trace of his body has been found by searchers and his wife said it was possible that Bernard, who speaks Tibetan fluently and is well acquainted with the terrain, might be trying to make his way out through Kashmir or Tibet.

Bernard—author of a number of books on Tibet—began a trip to Ki Monastery August 20. He was last reported seen by a group of shepherds who said his party was attacked by tribal raiders and his Moslem servants killed. They said they did not know whether Bernard had escaped.

Mrs. Bernard arrived here yesterday from Simla.

Six days after her husband left the Punjab, she said, Hindu-Moslem rioting spread into the valley.

Mrs. Bernard said she learned her husband was short of food at the time of the reported attack and was attempting to get back to the Kulu Valley.

"He may be snowed in," she said, "If he is, I know he would be delighted to spend the winter in a Tibetan monastery."

Bernard once lived with priests at the Buddhist shrine in Tibet and eventually was received into the Buddhist priesthood.

He received his Ph.D. degree in oriental philosophy from Columbia University.

His former wife, Opera Singer Ganna Walska, described him as a white lama, Yogi and a lawyer. In a suit for divorce last year she said that as a practicing Yogi Bernard was able to stand on his head for three hours at a time.

Bernard and Mme. Walska were divorced in Santa Barbara, Calif., July 13, 1949, at which time he agreed to vacate the luxurious Penthouse of the Gods high atop windswept Santa Ynez Mountains, which the singer had equipped for his "spiritual meditations."

During the suit, Bernard testified that he received a $40,000 settlement when he was divorced in 1938 by Viola Werthheim, a niece of Henry Morgenthau, sr. He sued Mme. Walska for separate maintenance, but withdrew his action just before she obtained her decree.

100,000 Chinese Reds Reported In Fierce Attacks

Peiping, Oct. 30 (AP).—Chinese Communists, said by government dispatches to total 100,000 men, pressed fierce new assaults today on Kirin and made diversionary stabs at the outskirts of Changchun, Manchurian capital 60 miles to the west.

The government accounts said the defenders, aided by strafing planes, were holding firm and had inflicted heavy casualties on the attackers.

Other government reports said progress was being made in reopening the railway from Mukden northeast to Szepingkai, but the Communists still held several points of the 70-mile route from Szepingkai to Changchun.

Girl, 2, Is Killed By Father's Truck

Frederick, Md., Oct. 30.—A 2½-year-old girl was instantly killed yesterday when she fell or ran under the wheels of her father's truck. The child, Sharon Elizabeth Rudy, was playing in the yard of her home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Rudy. The father told Sergt. W. W. Corbin of the State police that before he started the truck he saw the child standing at a safe distance but when he had driven about 10 feet he felt the impact as the car struck her. She was dead on arrival at the hospital.

Shooting, Robbery Holds Baltimorean And 6 Brooklynites

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—Six residents of Brooklyn, N. Y., and their Baltimore host were charged with burglary today, and four of the group were also charged with intent to kill a policeman as the result of a running gun battle Tuesday.

Police searched the apartment of Solly Geller, 35, after Patrolman William McGee broke up a robbery of a warehouse belonging to a cigarette vending company. Officers routed half a dozen kid-gloved Brooklyners from closets and under the furniture.

Defendants were named as: Joseph Gentile, peddler; Joseph Lekow, salesman; Angelo Inglese, alias Vincent Marino, mechanic; Louis Rafkind, chauffeur; George Cohen, painter, and Julius Geller, mechanic.

Inglese, Cohen, Solly Geller and Gentile were also accused of shooting at Patrolman McGee.

Riot squads turned out a whole block before the apartment was searched. The $2012 loot was left behind at the warehouse office.

Keyser Man Freed In Traffic Death

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Herman James Brill, 39, Keyser, W. Va., was acquitted on a manslaughter charge by Trial Magistrate Frank A. Perdew today.

Brill had been held in connection with the death last Friday of John Coleman, 60, of Midland. Police said Brill was the driver of a car which struck Coleman Thursday night.

Hagerstown to Reap Harvest in Yule Trees

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—The city of Hagerstown will reap a double yield this Christmas from its tree planting on the watershed above the Edgemont Reservoir.

The trees were planted seven years ago as a soil conservation measure. The city will cut down 1500 of them and sell them as Christmas trees to the highest bidder.

Maryland State Police To Train at Fort Meade

Training of Maryland State police recruits will be conducted temporarily at Fort George G. Meade starting November 3, Lieut. W. H. Conroy, head of the training school, announced yesterday in Baltimore.

Conroy said the newest class of 42 would be in training for four to five months.

Greek Police Seize AP Execution Pictures

Athens, Oct. 30 (AP).—Police at Hassani Airport, near Athens, seized today one of a series of Associated Press pictures showing the execution of four men convicted of conspiracy and murder.

The Associated Press protested to Press Minister Nicholas Baltazzi, who obtained from the Minister of Public Order, Constantin Rentis, an order that the picture could proceed. The plane for London, however, already had left.

History Shows Soviet Aims, Byrnes Finds

mania, and a large area was lost to the new Poland.

During the first 20 years of Soviet rule, the only extension of territory was the annexation in 1926 of certain islands in the Arctic. But in 1939 the Soviet Union embarked upon an active policy of expansion. Between December 4, 1939, and the end of 1945, the Soviet Union took control of the territories of Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Bessarabia, south Sakhalin and the Kuriles, parts of Finland and of Poland, the Konigsberg area in East Prussia, the Transcarpathian Ukraine, and Tannu Tuva. It also took over Port Arthur where, although it did not acquire sovereignty, it did acquire the right for 30 years to maintain a naval base jointly with China. In all, nearly 300,000 square miles of territory have been acquired since 1939, bringing the area of the Soviet Union to 8,455,939 square miles, only slightly less than the greatest extent of czarist Russia.

It is clear, then, that expansionism is not an innovation of the Communist regime. It is rooted in Russian history. Only the personalities and the tactics have changed.

o-o

Russia's modern leaders nevertheless have given us an outstanding demonstration of the means they are quite willing to employ to achieve their ends. This is found in the story of Russo-German relations from the Munich agreement in September, 1938, through the Russo-German Nonaggression Pact of August, 1939, to Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union in June, 1941.

In an after-dinner conversation at Yalta, Stalin said that the Soviet government would never have entered into the Nonaggression Pact with Germany had it not been for the attempt at Munich to appease Hitler and the failure of Britain and France to consult the Soviet Union on the subject.

Certainly it is true that immediately after Munich, the Soviet press began to modify its campaign of criticism against Germany. By December, 1938, when a trade agreement between the two countries was renewed, the press felt free to hail the action as a forward step in Soviet-German relations. Shortly thereafter, in an address to a Congress of the Communist Party, Stalin stated that the only differences between Germany and Soviet Russia were ideological, and these differences were exaggerated by others who wanted someone else to "pull their chestnuts out of the fire" for them.

In the spring of 1939, Stalin made known his disappointment over the results of Soviet negotiations with France and England. Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov, known for his understanding of "the West" was removed and replaced by V. M. Molotov.

Seemed Indifferent

HITLER seemed indifferent to these overtures. It was not until the summer that Hitler evidently decided he would need the support of Russia to make his projected attack on Poland. Events followed so quickly that they mystified the governments of the world and frightened those of us who still hoped war might be avoided.

The history of those negotiations remained obscure until records of them were discovered among the captured archives of the Nazi government. They make an important contribution to our understanding of what it is the Soviet Union seeks. That part of the story which includes the conversations of the principal actors was reported by Gustav Hilger, counselor of the German Embassy in Moscow, who acted as interpreter for the negotiators. His report is from notes made at the time when he could have had no motive for making them inaccurate or false. The rest of the story is based upon official documents discovered in the files of the German Foreign Office.

The record, therefore, is German and has not been confirmed by Soviet sources. However, it cannot be disregarded by anyone seeking the truth about what occurred in that fateful year preceding Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union. Nor can it be disregarded by anyone seeking to understand what is in the minds of those in the Kremlin today. Do they merely desire security? To get what they regard as security, do they intend to expand their control over other states and people? Often it is possible to tell what is in a man's mind and heart by what he has said and done in the past in relation to the same issues.

Let us see what guidance this history holds for us. I think it reasonable to assume that Soviet ambitions still include the territory Molotov desired when he sent his message to Hitler. Some of those desires have been fulfilled. However, the flush of victory has encouraged the Soviet government to extend its ambitions.

In the North, their demands against Finland have been satisfied. During the war, Mr. Molotov explored the possibility of extending Soviet power a little through concessions from Norway. In November, 1944, he asked Norway to grant the Soviet Union greater economic privileges in the Spitzbergen group of islands. He wanted outright possession of Bear Island and the right to establish military facilities on other islands of the group.

Mr. Molotov made this request despite the fact that the 1920 treaty—by which Norwegian sovereignty over these islands was recognized and which was signed by thirty-four countries, including the Soviet Union—contained a proviso that Norway could not construct fortifications and that the islands could "never be used for warlike purposes." The Norwegian government, after first agreeing to discuss both subjects, has since declared it would consider only the economic issue and has pointed out that the military proposal must be a subject of multilateral negotiation.

In the East, the Soviet Union now has all of Sakhalin and, in addition, has taken over the Kuriles and has acquired rights in Port Arthur, Dairen and on the Manchurian railroad. Whether Stalin will continue to resist the temptation offered by the successes of the Chinese Communist forces in Manchuria is a question which, at this writing, remains in the balance.

Blocked by Council

SOVIET ASPIRATIONS south of Batum and Baku have not been realized, but the effort has been made. Turkey was asked to cede the provinces of Kars and Ardahan south of Batum. The effort to extend south of Baku into Iranian territory was blocked by the Security Council.

The familiar technique of trying to install a puppet government under the protection of the Red army was employed. The Red army interfered with the armed forces of little Iran. The Soviets encouraged the establishment in Azerbaijan of an independent government. The case was brought before the Security Council. When the Soviets kept their troops in Iran beyond the date of their treaty, the Council acted on the complaint of Iran. Every member of the Council except the Soviet Union and Poland voted to protect the integrity of Iran. The Soviet Union complied with the Security Council's decision because it was not yet ready or willing to be isolated from the rest of the world.

The Bulgarian government, installed and protected by the Red army, has now made a pact unnecessary. Thus the "safety zone" between the Soviet Union and the Straits, which Molotov requested, has been achieved. In Romania, a similar regime has been installed by tactics I described earlier. The pursuit of Soviet ambitions in Hungary is a more recent story, but the pattern is old.

Poland has been subordinated to the status of a satellite. Albania and Yugoslavia are tightly clasped in the Soviet-dominated Slav bloc. Czechoslovakia is a captive of this bloc. Out of all the European areas toward which Molotov expressed an interest, only Greece and Turkey remain free. And the struggle for them is in progress.

The reports of our able observer, Mark Ethridge, have made it clear that a small, well-organized Communist minority, based in and supplied from Greece's Soviet-dominated neighbors, would have captured Greece long ago had it not been for two things: (1) The action by the United Nations, and (2) the Soviets' realization that, if they took over Greece, the United States and the United Kingdom would demand that the United Nations act against such aggression.

The Security Council's Balkan investigating committee delayed and exposed the effort. But chaos still prevails and the fate of Greece hangs in the balance while the American mission headed by former Gov. Dwight Griswold seeks to promote the economic and political health which alone can kill off the disease of Communist-agitated unrest.

As for Turkey, we must remember that Stalin declared at Potsdam the continuing interest of the Soviet Union in the Straits and that subsequently a demand was made for the right to build a land and naval base in the area. Our efforts to obtain collective guarantees to maintain the freedom of the Dardanelles have been unsuccessful. We have now taken other measures to protect the sovereignty of Turkey.

Karl Marx and other historians made it plain that Soviet aspirations differ little from czarist aspirations. And certainly Mr. Molotov's 1940 demands are a good general signpost for the immediate future.

Time is not necessarily on the Russian side in Europe or in Asia, according to Mr. Byrnes. He believes that the Soviets do not want to conquer Europe but rather to dictate the policies of non-Soviet European countries. And he believes that the United Nations can check this desire until some future time when the Russian people themselves can control their government's policies. His ideas on how the United States can help to bring this about are stated in the next installment of "Speaking Frankly," which will be published tomorrow.

Aspirations Are Made Clear by Historians

New Drug From Ground Mold May Aid in Tuberculosis Cure

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 30 (U.P.)—A powerful, new drug that ultimately may be a partner with streptomycin in the battle against tuberculosis, has been discovered and passed preliminary tests on experimental animals, it was disclosed tonight.

The drug is to be known as chloromycetin. Like streptomycin, the new drug comes from a ground mold.

Preliminary reports on the isolation and testing of the drug in test tube and in experimental animals will be published tomorrow in Science Magazine, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Authors of one article are Dr. Paul R. Burkholder of Osborn Bontanical Laboratory, Yale University, and Drs. John Ehrlick, Quentin R. Bartz, Robert M. Smith and Dwight A. Joslyn of the Parke and Davis Research Laboratories, Detroit.

They tell of the isolation of the drug from a solid sample collected in a mulched field near Caracas, Venezuela. This part of the work was done by Dr. Burkholder. Most of the subsequent tests were made in the Parke & Davis Laboratory.

The drug was found to be 100 per cent effective against the germ that causes tuberculosis and against a bacteria known as brucella abortus, a germ that causes undulant fever.

The drug also was found about 50 per cent effective against numerous other so-called gram negative bacteria, including germs that cause some types of pneumonia and superficial infections, such as boils and pimples.

A report also is due tomorrow by Drs. J. E. Smadel and E. S. Jackson of the department of virus and rickettsial diseases, Army Medical Department Research and Graduate School, Washington, D. S.; who tested the new drug in mice and in chick embryos.

Their report tells of infecting mice with scrub typhus—a disease common in China—and then treating them with chloromycetin. They said "excellent" results were obtained.

Court Studies New Trial Plea for Eisler

Associate Justice James Morris yesterday took under advisement a plea by counsel for Gerhard Eisler that he should be granted a new trial on grounds that "political and prejudicial" arguments led to his conviction.

Eisler, convicted last August 15 of making false statements in an application for permission to return to Germany, faces a maximum sentence of 5 years and $5000 fine.

Eisler is currently free on bond after being convicted of contempt of the House Committee on Un-American Activities ni a separate case. This conviction is in process of being appealed. The conviction involved his refusal to be sworn as a witness before the committee, which called him the "No. 1 Communist" in the United States.

In yesterday's move, Chief Defense Counsel Abraham Isserman told Morris the Government's case was built up by appealing to hostility against the Communist Party and the Soviet Union.

It is true there were no bands playing outside, no militia in the courtroom . . . but nevertheless an all-persuasive situation existed which made it impossible for the jury to exercise freedom of choice," Isserman said.

Argentina Warned About Crop Losses

Buenos Aires, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Nemesio de Olariaga, president of the Argentine Rural Confederations, warned today that "mistaken agrarian policies adopted by government advisers" will result in a 25 per cent crop reduction next year, and that "fabulous prices" charged to foreign consumers could bring the loss of Argentina's export markets.

Addressing the Argentine Rural Congress, attended by delegations from 115 rural societies, Olariaga said 1947-48 crops will be smaller "despite the optimism of official statistics."

He described government advisors as "omnipotent," and charged they had forced the state to "assume a position of crude and confiscatory despoliation of farm production values, in retaining 70 per cent of the gross value of produce, as in the case of grains."

The state has become an "obligatory partner as far as profits are concerned, but it abandons the producer to its own fate in case of losses," Olariaga said.

He declared that unless the "fabulous prices charged to foreign consumers are rectified," the country may lose the "only gold mine" it has.

He explained that present policies not only depress the Argentine producer, but stimulate greater agricultural and cattle production in countries which are now Argentina's clients, and which by the end of 1948, probably will attain a production capable of "supplying their own needs without depending on our country."

Secretary Krug Collapses During Phoenix Speech

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 30 (INS).—Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug collapsed today while addressing the National Reclamation Association convention in Phoenix.

Physicians gave "fatigue" as the reason for the Cabinet member's collapse, and said his condition was not serious.

Krug was taken at once to his hotel, doctors recommended that he take a long rest.

Truman and DeGasperi Open New Radio Link

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP).—President Truman and Premier Alcide de Gasperi exchanged messages today over a new radio link between Rome and New York opened by Press Wireless.

Both messages emphasized that the new channel, especially for press use, would "strengthen the liberty of the press." It will also, De Gasperi said, "cement friendship between the Italian republic and your great federation of free peoples." The American President replied with his best wishes for "your country in my name and that of the American people."

Red Chief in Germany Wants to Bar Brazil

Berlin, Oct. 30 (AP).—Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, Soviet military governor in Germany, demanded today that the Allied Control Council in Berlin disaccredit the Brazilian military mission to the council because of Brazil's rupture of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

Sokolovsky criticized both Brazil and Chile for breaking relations with Moscow, which he described as a "reactionary and antidemocratic act." Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor, announced that he could not accept Sokolovsky's statement.

Grain Prices

Argentina Attacks Post Editorial

Buenos Aires, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Pro-government newspapers today criticized the United Press with transmitting a recent Washington Post editorial against the grain price policies of the Argentine government.

The criticism came on the heels of an official statement rejecting The Post's charge that Argentina was demanding excessive prices for the wheat needed in hungry countries.

In a counter-charge, the government said that a foreign blockade against Argentina had prevented it from making larger grain shipments.

"The United Press continues to spread false and malicious information," said an editorial in Democracia. It added that the government statement had refuted The Washington Post's assertions.

El Lider captioned its editorial: "Washington Post and United Press deserve world reprobation," and recalled that:

"In the United Nations Assembly yesterday, Argentina indorsed a French resolution calling for 'freedom of the press with responsibility.'"

Such action was timely, Lider said, as it came "just when the United States press, conceived by and closely tied with the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, unleashes a storm of malevolence against the Argentine nation."

Lider went on to say that the "impudence of The Washington Post and the cynicism of the United Press in spreading its fallacies to the four winds . . . are abominable."

Miami Picked by Legion

Indianapolis, Oct. 30 (AP).—The National executive committee of the American Legion today decided the Legion's thirtieth annual convention would be held in Miami, Fla., on October 17-21 of next year.

Reds Reject Trade Talks

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 30 (AP).—Thirty-two nations have accepted invitations to the International Trade and Employment Conference opening in Havana November 21, but Russia and seven other countries have declined, it was announced today.

Max Suetens of Belgium, chairman of the preparatory committee for the conference, made the statement after 23 nations had signed a general agreement on reduction of preferential tariffs, quantitative restrictions and other trade barriers. Countries signing the pact represent about half the world's trade, or a volume of about 10 billion dollars a year, Suetens said.

Countries other than Russia which declined to send delegates to the Havana conference are the Ukraine, White Russia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Siam, Saudi Arabia and Ethiopia.

Czechoslovakia, generally considered in the Soviet sphere, accepted. Others accepting: Afghanistan, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Haiti, Indonesia, Iraq, Liberia, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, the Philippines, Portugal, Southern Rhodesia, Sweden, Switzerland, Trans-Jordan, Turkey, Britain, United States and Uruguay.

The general agreement on tariffs and trade came after more than six months of negotiations here. The pact will be published November 18. Signatory countries are Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Lebanon, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Southern Rhodesia, South Africa, Britain and the United States.

60 Expected

Belgium, Canada, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, United Kingdom, and United States signed a protocol making the agreement effective January 1. The others are expected to sign the protocol by November 15.

The announcement of the signing of the general pact followed by a day Britain's disclosure of a new Anglo-American tariff agreement embodying concessions on both sides and tariff pacts signed by Britain with 14 other countries represented at the Geneva talks.

Angel Faivovitch, chief of the Chilean delegation here, said he expected Chile and most of the other Latin American countries to be represented at Havana. Total acceptances are expected to reach 60.

SHIRLINGTON -- ONE OF THE NATION'S LARGEST BUSINESS CENTERS

SHIRLINGTON CORPORATION Joseph Cherner, Pres. HObart 5000

Counting Pennies with Carolyn

There's no better time than this evening to find out how much fun it really is to shop in Shirlington on a Friday night when the stores are open till nine. Tonight this beautiful modern business center is celebrating Hallowe'en, night when the witches ride their broomsticks and out-of-this-world creatures fill the air, with very down-to-earth values in its attractive, spacious shops. Even the hobgoblin of difficult parking won't haunt you in Shirlington. You can find a safe-from-bumps place to leave your car, right in the center of the shopping area.

You've come to the right place for last-minute purchases for your Hallowe'en Party. Guests from 2 to 72 smack their lips over delicious home-made ice cream from Elfin's. At Elfin's, too, you'll find the luscious home-made candies that always make a party seem more special.

Pittle's Bakery is the place to buy Hallowe'en cakes to serve with the ice cream. These delicious cakes, made with dairy-fresh ingredients, may be ordered in advance if you want them with special decorations. There's an abundance of cookies, too . . . macaroons and chocolate cookies, Toll House and sugar cookies, delectable little partified "Petits Fours."

Woolworth's is full of Hallowe'en decorations . . . grinning jack-o-lanterns and fancy hats and frightening false faces and Hallowe'en table cloths and napkins and party favors. You can eat your pumpkin, and have it, too. All you have to do is buy a pound of the funny pumpkin-faced marshmallows at the candy counter!

It's not such a jump as you think from Hallowe'en to Christmas . . . only seven weeks. That means it isn't a bit too soon to order personalized Christmas cards, with your name printed, at Cohen's picture framing store. It's easy to choose your favorite cards from a wide and wonderful selection to suit every taste and every purse . . . etching type cards, beautiful gilt and snow-flake trimmed cards, cards with jolly sentiments, and more serious religious cards . . . just take your pick. Prices start at 25 for $1.

A most beautiful lingerie collection has just arrived at Nugent's. Lovely for brides is a white satin trousseau set, deep with mists of lace on puffed sleeve gown, slip and pantie, all trimmed with satin bow knots. For yourself, you may select from slips in the new fashion lengths by Corette and other famous makers. White, heaven blue, tearose, black, are all to be had in tailored or lacy styles, trimmed with embroidery and applique and fagotting . . . truly dreamy.

Why wait for Christmas if you need boudoir slippers now, when Beck's has a whole slipper bazaar of footwear to make Cinderella jealous. Satin mules fluffed with maribou vie for glamour honors with metal-shot lounging mules. Furry scuffs are beloved by the young . . . fleece-lined leather "warmies" are favorites with everyone who likes cozy toes when the nights and mornings are nippy. Blue, red, wine, white, black, green, gold . . . name your color, your style, your size—Beck's has it.

You may want to celebrate Hallowe'en by going out. You can't find a pleasanter place to go than the Shirlington Delicatessen where highly seasoned food is earning a reputation with local "gourmets." Dine if you wish, or come in later for refreshments and to enjoy sports events just as they happen!

Right in the Hallowe'en spirit is the "Kiss of Death," gangster movie of revenge, starring Victor Mature and Brian Donlevy at the Shirlington Theater tonight. The children, and you, too, just must see "Song of the South" tomorrow. "Zippity Doo Da," if you've seen it before, you'll still want to see this delightful Walt Disney concoction of human actors and cartoons again.

Whisky Imports

Charles Luckman, head of the Citizens Food Committee, is in favor of banning imports of distilled spirits during the 60-day suspension of domestic distilling. In his opinion the industry will be subjected to a certain amount of unfair competition if the Government permits unrestricted importation of foreign liquors while our own distilleries are shut down. There is in addition an obvious lack of consistency in a policy that tends to encourage imports of foreign spirits made from grain while our own producers are trying to conserve grain for export by suspending distilling operations.

Notwithstanding these logical arguments in favor of a temporary ban on imports of distilled spirits, the arguments against Mr. Luckman's proposal seem to us to be much more cogent. The domestic distilling industry has little to fear from foreign competition, since imports constitute only a small fraction of domestic consumption of hard liquors. For example, it is estimated that imports of Scotch whisky account for only 5 per cent of domestic consumption. Furthermore, high-priced imported whiskies offer no real competition to lower-priced domestic whiskies, while in the higher price ranges consumer demand is largely determined by tastes and habits that put limits on domestic sales of foreign whiskies. Finally, and most important, the imposition of a ban on imported spirits would deprive foreign countries of dollars that they sorely need to build up their exchange resources and reduce their dependence on American financial aid. To be sure, the amount of dollars earned by foreign countries from shipments of whiskies and other spirits to the United States is small, averaging only 5.4 million dollars per month in 1946. And the take of any single exporting country, such as the United Kingdom and Canada, is, of course, only a fraction of that limited sum. Nevertheless, every little bit helps to relieve the pressure of the dollar scarcity.

If we are honestly determined to assist other countries to achieve a balance in their international accounts and thus hasten the restoration of foreign trade based on an exchange of goods, we must be prepared to accept the goods that these countries have to offer in payment of our exports. While the exclusion for a brief period of imports of distilled spirits would not entail any great loss of dollars to individual exporting countries, it would undoubtedly strengthen existing suspicion of the sincerity of our desire to assist world rehabilitation by following liberal trade policies that enable our debtors to find outlets for their goods in the American market. The resentment and fear aroused abroad by even a temporary ban on importation of distilled spirits would be a high price to pay for the dubious gains resulting from such an ill-judged attempt to propitiate the domestic distilling industry.

Profit-Sharing

The 13-year-old profit-sharing plan of the General Electric Co. is to be scrapped insofar as the rank and file of employes are concerned. The rich bonuses enjoyed by the president and other executives will continue to be paid—an invidious arrangement that will doubtless bring harsh comment from labor leaders. However, some of the sharpest criticism of profit-sharing has come from labor leaders themselves who see in the program a device cunningly designed to limit the bargaining power of unions and to weaken their hold on labor.

It is significant that when GE introduced its profit-sharing plan, employes were not organized. Moreover, the benefits of the plan were limited to employes who had been with the company five years or longer. Thus the system offered an incentive to workers to remain on the job and become eligible for profit bonuses. Today the situation is radically altered. GE employes have been unionized and the union has succeeded in bringing into the profit-sharing plan all employes who have been with the company for a year. Hence, President Wilson explains, its original purpose has been defeated. The profit bonus is now simply an addition to wages—a very insignificant addition, too—instead of being a reward for length of service.

Under present conditions, therefore, the company's decision to drop its profit-sharing plan seems to us to be wise. For the methods of collective bargaining practiced today by strong labor unions leave little margin for development of genuine profit-sharing plans. Demands for wage increases are pushed to the limit so that the employer is deprived of the incentive, sometimes of the power, to supplement wages from profits. Indeed, if profit bonuses are liberal, that is a signal to organized labor to ask for further wage increases. Hence, from the employer's viewpoint, the system of profit-sharing becomes an increasingly unsatisfactory method of remunerating employes, especially if the system is so comprehensive that it no longer helps to reduce labor turnover.

From the viewpoint of employes, too, reliance upon profit-sharing as a means of supplementing wages is unsatisfactory. For the worker is better served by a payment system that is certain and capable of determination in advance than by a system that is tied to fluctuations in year-to-year profits. Furthermore, under an established profit-sharing plan, employes come to regard the high profit bonuses of good times as a regular part of their income and to spend accordingly. When profits decline, they resent reductions in such bonuses and may be seriously embarrassed by the resultant loss of income. Generally speaking, therefore, it is better for all concerned to put wage agreements on a firm basis, without any direct tie-up with profits, and let the benefits of industrial prosperity, reflected in high profits, reach workers in the form of regular wage increases, pensions and other benefits.

Political Affiliation

A parade of witnesses has now defied the authority of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to ask them whether they are, or have been, members of the Communist Party. Their defiance, in nearly every instance, has been accompanied by stump speeches, gavel-beating, general indecorum and contempt citations which intensified the carnival, or Halloween, atmosphere in which these hearings have been conducted since their inception. For our part, we have very little sympathy with or feeling for men who will not acknowledge their political faith. These witnesses could have commanded a measure of respect had they candidly avowed Communist Party membership (if they are, in fact, Communists) and had then challenged the committee to make the most of it.

Men have an indisputable right to join the Communist Party. But to say that it would be more seemly or courageous of them to admit their membership is not to say that any congressional committee has authority to require them to do so. A very vital constitutional point is raised by the committee's inquiry into personal political affiliation. Now that these witnesses have been cited for contempt, we presume that the courts will determine whether they were within their rights in refusing to answer these questions. Whatever the courts decide on this legal issue, however, we have no doubt that the line of questioning was a grossly improper one for the committee to pursue. It was as improper, in our judgment, as an inquiry into a man's religious affiliation. This, too, is something about which one ought not to be ashamed, yet it is something one ought not to be compelled to disclose.

Communist Party affiliation today is a serious social and economic handicap. The Committee on Un-American Activities has persistently suggested to Hollywood producers and executives that they should purge all Communists from their payrolls. The mere allegation that a motion picture employe is a Communist, let alone the forcing of an admission of it, operates, therefore, to impair his means of earning a living. What the committee has tried to do throughout these hearings is to set up a blacklist. And this, we think, amounts to an infringement of the freedom of the screen. A man's political opinions are of legitimate interest to his employer only if they affect the quality of his work. That the political opinions of the Communists or alleged Communists in Hollywood have in any way affected the motion pictures produced by the industry, the committee has not even attempted to demonstrate. Until it establishes this essential premise, the committee will have provided not even a shred of justification for its inquiry into private political belief.

Security Risks

In evaluating the Central Intelligence Agency's discharge of several employes as "bad security risks," it is necessary, in our opinion, to accept the premise that the director must have the right to dismiss anyone in whom he does not have full confidence. Anything less would jeopardize operations of incalculable importance to our national policy. This has nothing to do with union membership, which we regard as a false issue. Admiral Hillenkoetter by no means understated the case when he said: "If you're going to have a good intelligence agency, you have got to have very high security standards." It was for precisely this reason that the Central Intelligence Agency was established as an independent organization and was exempted from Civil Service regulations.

There is, however, a very great difference between a man who talks too much and a man who is deliberately disloyal to the United States. Yet, we submit, in the minds of many persons the terms "loyalty" and "security" are closely connected. The distinction is a vital one, and one which the CIA, now that its employment problems have been aired, has perhaps not taken enough pains to make clear. A person who is a "bad security risk" from the standpoint of the CIA may have done nothing more than arouse the suspicion that he might be indiscreet. But in the present temper of the country, to discharge an employe from the CIA for security reasons, or even for no stipulated reason, places on him an impossible stigma. In the eyes of potential employers his loyalty stands impugned.

The least the CIA should do in security cases where loyalty is not an issue is to give the employe a chance to resign without prejudice. Moreover, we think the CIA might well adopt the Civil Service discharge for "unsuitability"—meaning merely that the employe is unsuited for his present job by reason of temperament or otherwise, but is not disqualified for other Federal service. Recognition of the Central Intelligence Agency's special status by no means relieves it of the necessity for fairness. Nothing could be more unfortunate for the Government's loyalty program than to give impetus to the fear that cases of personality difficulty are being lumped in the same category with subversion.

Peron's Profiteering

The Argentine government press office has castigated The Washington Post for an editorial criticizing what we called Argentina's international hijacking in wheat prices. It is curious that at the very time of this indignant protest the Peron government was giving fresh proof of our charge by hiking those prices another notch. The cost now paid by needy countries for Argentine wheat is up to $6 a bushel, whereas the price the Argentine government pays farmers remains at $1.25. The same sort of profiteering has been applied to sales of linseed oil. In other words, Peron, through his foreign trade monopoly, is bleeding customers who have no present option but to buy Argentine exports, in order to finance his dream of industrial and military empire. We leave our readers to judge whether we have been "false and malicious" in pointing questioningly at these figures.

The press office's recitation of President Peron's pledge to do "everything possible" to help war-stricken countries sounds a little hollow in the light of those facts. Surely the operation of a sort of international black market in wheat which exacts a premium from dollar-strained countries hardly merits the accolade that the Argentine government pins on itself that it is cooperative. Cooperation does not have the same meaning to Peron's government that it has to us. Applied to what the government is actually doing, it is, indeed, an impostor word, and this is what Argentines outside the government would call it. We would remind the government that all we did was to print a record which has filled with disgust all the men who are engaged on the world's food problem.

In another category the press office reply is grossly misleading. It charges that an American "economic blockade" forced the Argentine government to burn 500 million dollars worth of crops because it could not import necessary machinery and transportation equipment. There has been no such blockade. Argentina was forced to burn some grain, mostly corn, on her railroads and other transportation facilities during the war because she could not obtain coal and oil from the United States. The reason was that every available resource in this country was needed for war, a war which Argentina, by the way, did not fight.

There is some truth in Economic Czar Miranda's statement the other day that the drop in Argentine grain exports is attributable to transportation breakdowns. Senor Miranda implied, however, that the United States was responsible for those breakdowns. The truth of the matter is that the United States has assisted Argentina to obtain scarce materials, such as tires and trucks, only to have them remain undistributed once they arrived in Argentina. The waterfront at Buenos Aires is reported to be crowded with deteriorating American supplies. Moreover, the alleged transportation breakdown is in part a breakdown in internal priorities; in many instances grain is not being transported to markets because industrial goods have preempted railroad cars.

Indeed, this policy of favoring industry over agriculture reflects the Peron program of shifting land utilization away from farming. This has not only depleted the supply of Argentine farm labor but indicates a studied policy of giving industrial workers preference over farmers. The result, we suspect, may be likened to a sitdown strike among farmers who are reluctant to sell their grain to the government when they know the price Peron will exact bears no relation to the price paid them.

No one would be happier than we to acknowledge Argentine cooperation when such cooperation is genuinely forthcoming. We suggest that we can be answered by Argentina's joining the International Emergency Food Council. Another answer would be to join with the United States in the job of putting western Europe on its feet. This would be good insurance on Peron's part, for collapsed economies in western Europe would mean less business for Argentina. At the same time such a policy would be a demonstration that the Peron doctrine of "universal fraternization" is something besides a heap of empty words. Peron's policies, as at present pursued, remind one of a gambler who is trying to make a killing while the going is good—a short-sighted policy for a government which plans to stay in business, let alone a selfish one.

FOR THE HEART IN DECEMBER

Love, the pale, implacable dove
Broods on the winter bough
Where lately spring and he Contrived a song.

But now the dulcet overtone,
The brief, repeated vow
Spin on the winter wind.
Their echoing
Almost persuades the bird
To sing.

New Soviet Strategy

Since the end of the war, Soviet Russia has been going through an unprecedented reorganization of her government apparatus. This fact has passed almost unnoticed in the United States. All government departments and ministries with the exception of the ministry of foreign affairs and ministry of defense have been divided into two self-sufficient parts completely independent of each other. In every field there is a ministry with the suffix "western" and another with the suffix "eastern."

There has been no legislative act published in the Soviet press concerning the ministry of defense, but its accomplished division is almost a certainty to this writer. The line of demarcation between "eastern" and "western" parts is roughly along the Volga River and eastern shore of the Caspian Sea. There are indications, however, that this line has moved as far east as the Ural Mountains.

Officially the center of all these ministries has remained in Moscow, but extraordinary activity in the administrative field in Novosibirsk and Krasnoyarsk points to the fact that a large part of the "eastern" ministries have been transferred to these cities. It is possible that the "eastern" ministries have been completely moved to central and western Siberia without any fanfare or publicity.

Coordination of these two parts is purely political and is centered in the hands of the Politbureau. The same end means also practical absorption into the Politbureau of the ministry of foreign affairs which was always close to it.

Another equally important reform has been contemplated without publicity. Since the war all ministerial posts have been filled exclusively by career bureaucrats or narrow specialists. Practically all ministers now are persons unknown not only abroad but also inside of the Soviet Union. They have no political influence either in the party or among the general public.

These facts give the picture of the streamline organization of the Soviet Union politically and structurally. Now the Politbureau (or Stalin) can easily shift its activities from Europe to Asia or to any other part of the world. On the Soviet side it is really a state of "push-button cold war," ready for change to a "shooting war" at any moment.

The inference should be that publicity about the real or fictitious creation of the center of Comintern in Belgrade, which we got from Moscow, is no more than a smoke screen to cover real plans and actions. We should attentively watch the Soviet propaganda, but even more carefully study actions and facts concerning the Kremlin.

Quoddy Delay

It's time I took exception to the slow motion methods of WAA. The Passamaquoddy village in Maine was surplus when I was consultant to the Surplus Property Board. It is surplus today. Since my resignation 17 months have elapsed.

I'm not surprised. Eighteen months ago, or about a month before I resigned, I discovered the importance of time. I discovered and placed on record a plan whereby surplus could be disposed of on a guaranteed basis of 15 months after each item was declared. The recognition of this plan would have assured the sale of Quoddy to someone way before this time. When I found it took a whole month to get the Administration to make one single small decision, I knew it would take years to do any good.

Today I can tell my story. The Government says Quoddy is worth 395,000 dollars. The highest bidder who would put the property to work says it is worth 105,555 dollars. That's quite a difference in two men's opinions. As a matter of fact, it is such a difference that I believe we the public should demand that the man who values Quoddy at 395,000 dollars be designated by the President as the man to put it to work. To have such a value he must have a plan for its use. Why should it be idle so long if such a plan exists?

Soldiers' Home

Another Washington newspaper wants the Soldiers' Home area to be taken off the list of scenic and historic places of interest that makes this city one of the most interesting and beautiful cities in the United States.

Central Park in New York City for example, would be a big source of income to the city if it were to be turned over for real estate development to make more room for dwellings and apartment houses. But the city fathers of Washington should not fall into that error.

Washington, the city beautiful, should expand and spread. The crowded Negro sections and the slums should be rebuilt along sanitary and beauty lines.

Taxes that uphold Washington reputation, and are spent for a better place to live in, are money well spent.

The United States Soldiers' Home is a health spot, a beauty spot, a park area. Think of it as such, and treat it as such!

Hollywood Visitors

It seems strange that a class of people that has grown rich off the lush earnings of an industry which produces so little of anything that could even remotely be termed art, would take it upon themselves to visit Washington in order to lecture and chastise our Congress in its endeavor to protect them as well as the entire country from the inroads of communism.

It is also painful to note that not one of these people openly asserts his supreme loyalty to America, or expresses a desire to help in ridding us of the dangerous influences which exist today.

Instead of squawking about personal liberties and the right to do and think as one pleases regardless of ruinous consequences to others, these actors would gain much more respect for themselves by a complete reversal of their attitude and their actions.

If wrongs and abuses exist under our democratic form of government, they will certainly never be rectified by people whose loyalty to the United States can be doubted or questioned in any way.

Out For Commies

The Communists and their stooges are heading a determined effort to force the Committee on Un-American Activities out of existence. They seem to have small chance to succeed.

However, while compulsion will surely fail, I wish to recommend a course of action likely to secure the result they wish. They, and their sort, have only to move to Russia—or, if they remain here, to cease treasonable activity. Then the congressional committee they are attacking will most certainly gladly dissolve itself.

Expediency At Yalta

Reading of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly" in serial form in The Washington Post, with day-to-day interims for reflection, has certain advantages which, I feel sure, many readers must appreciate.

For example, it would seem fair to say that such a serialization is more likely to stimulate reasoned judgment of our foreign diplomacy on the basis of sequential transpired events up to the time of their occurrence, and therefore be fairer to the statesmen involved, than would be the case were the reader to pass too rapidly to the hindsight point of view of the final chapter, and reserve all consideration of appraisal until that time.

Nevertheless, in the unfolding of Mr. Byrne's serialization, one need not be more than a layman, to be struck with dismay at the revelation of a continuing policy of temporary expediency on the part of diplomatists, that frequently neglects substantial regard for some of the more fundamental tenets of principled behavior that are otherwise recognized and observed generally.

Thus, at the Yalta Conference, as at Munich, where parties of a first part bargained with parties of a second part, in ways to make pawns of nonbelligerent third parties, axioms of justness and uprightness appear neglected, indeed, when comparison is made with esteemed moments in history, when dire circumstances prevailed, but principle was never allowed to be slighted by expediency.

As an example of the latter, reference is made to Lincoln's enunciation of the Emancipation Proclamation, which declaration is explained by historians as having been initially regarded as anything but expedient, from a Union or allied State point of view. For, at the outset of the Civil War, the matter of slavery had been subordinated to the issue of secession, and there were actually slave States fighting on the Union side. Even though the Emancipation Proclamation only applied to States outside the Union, which made them technically outside the President's jurisdiction, the proclamation, as a policy for the conduct of the war, caused conversion of the struggle into a crusade against slavery, leaving no foundation for bargaining for something less than emancipation by States remaining on the Union side.

When, at Yalta, stipulations were similarly made concerning properties technically outside the civil and military lines of the bargaining governments, there could similarly have been no approved jurisdiction, except as the policy infused in these stipulations might become affirmed through the further conduct of the war, and in peace negotiations. In this case, however, departure from clearly established jurisdictions was made in the name of expediency, after principle had been brought to attention and discarded.

Under the circumstances, it would seem that, as with the Union in the Civil War, a pre-eminent regard for principle would have been all that would have been needed to restrain the opportunism of allies at the Yalta Conference, without ever entertaining the considerations of expediency from which memoirists would seek to draw justification for courses of action affected by their influence.

Is short, one does not have to reach the final chapter of a record on diplomacy, to appreciate that temporizing of principles, while fighting a principled war, will hardly lead to a satisfactory solution with the end of that war. This conclusion generates from a common stock of everyday axioms of behavior that no explanations of diplomatic expediency can quite mitigate.

Calling Washington

Controversial Bevan

LONDON.—At the age of 18, Britain's Minister of Health, Aneurin Bevan, went down into a Welsh coal pit to begin his working career. For a number of years he worked at the coal face—and that is hard, grueling work in darkness and fetid air.

It is, therefore, no accident that Bevan should be the most controversial and exciting figure in the present government. Coal does something to a man. Bevan's years in the mines sharpened his sense of social injustice and gave him the drive that has carried him to high office.

Both Conservatives and Laborites say that he will some day be Prime Minister of Great Britain. At 50, he is solid, thick-looking, with a heavy thatch of iron-gray hair. His eyes are the color of blue ice, but they have humorous glints that shine out.

In his solidness and his Welshness and in his sense of the dramatic, he bears a family resemblance to our own John L. Lewis. But for all his ambition and drive, it is difficult to imagine Bevan taking himself with the same personal self-satisfaction which characterizes Lewis.

Although it is not exactly in his province, Bevan talks freely about the coal crisis. Labor in the mines, he says, has throughout history been slave labor. It is eight hours of death to go down into the pits. Eight hours of burial each day. With the Welsh burr in his speech, this has an added force.

The United States, Bevan points out, would have had its own acute manpower problem in coal-mining if so much of both industry and home heating had not been converted to oil. That, says Bevan, has created an oil problem in the United States and an oil problem with political meaning all over the world.

IN THE Conservative press, Bevan is generally represented as the villain of the piece. He is credited with persuading the cabinet to carry through the new proposed restrictions on the House of Lords as a preliminary to nationalization of iron and steel. Bevan's wife, Jennie Lee, also a member of Parliament and now on a visit in the United States, shares her husband's convictions on socialization.

Certainly there is in Bevan more of the fighting spirit of the Labor Party of the past. The senior cabinet members were part of the wartime coalition government, and responsibility has checked their ardor for reform. They tend to be overawed by the enormity of the economic crisis which confronts them.

But Bevan has not altered his views about the nonworkability of the capitalist system when it reaches the phase of development in which too much wealth is concentrated in too few hands. As he puts it, there are too many I. O. U.s in the hands of the rich. Bevan rejects, with some show of annoyance, the suggestion that the Attlee government has put too many I. O. U.s in the pay envelope of the working man—I. O. U.s in the form of money that will buy little or nothing and that contributes therefore to England's inflation.

In the present cabinet, Bevan's powers are nothing like those of Sir Stafford Cripps, who was recently made Economic Coordinator with authority over several ministries. Two men could hardly be more unlike than Cripps and Bevan.

Cripps comes of a prosperous upper-class family of high idealism. Saintly is an adjective applied to him by both friends and foes. Deeply religious, he has in his face something of the righteousness of Woodrow Wilson.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, in his savage attack on the Labor government at the recent Conservative Party conference at Brighton, made an exception of Cripps, whom he praised for his integrity and ability. Bevan and Churchill are implacable enemies, Bevan being one of the few Laborites willing to take on Churchill in debate in the House of Commons.

One of Cripps' unpleasant duties is to order the curtailment of the public housing program, which was Bevan's pet project. The latter has been under fire for approving the start of construction on more houses than could be finished within the framework of the program. The London Times referred editorially to the "building inflation" and the inevitable losses to be suffered by builders, building owners and local authorities.

Bevan says now that his objective in 1948 is to finish some 350,000 dwelling units either already started or approved. On one wall of his office is a large map of England and Wales that is peppered with pins of different colors, representing the stages of work on city and rural houses throughout the land.

As he points to this area and that one, Bevan warms with pride. At least we did it, he says. We've been building houses that people with low incomes can live in.

So long as the Labor Party is in power, Bevan is sure to have an important place in the government. He has a wide popular following in the country and, moreover, no Labor Prime Minister would want this tough-minded man in opposition. And some day, given the present political tides, this former pit boy is very likely to move into No. 10 Downing st.

Corollary Of Aid

A Communication

AS A Frenchman, and for other obvious reasons, I am as much interested as any American in the present campaign launched by the American Government in providing food for some European countries.

When we are told that the purpose behind the American policy is to f e e d hungry European people, we must be conscious of the fact that only a few of these foreign countries, such as Italy, France and part of Germany, will be the beneficiaries and also that they will be supplied with merely such items as wheat, corn, milk, dried fruits, etc. Nevertheless, if the American population is 142 millions, do you really think that whatever your sacrifice and saving might be, you, the American people, will be able to provide enough food to p r e v e n t starvation among 40 million French, 42½ million Italians, 50 million or more Germans, without mentioning other people who might also be helped or other foreign countries which perhaps will be purchasers of American food?

IF THIS food campaign is successful, and I frevently hope it will be, this means, I fear, the sacrifice the American people are consenting to make is far greater than we can presently imagine. If I am right (or even if the sacrifice be relatively light), don't you think some definite measures should be taken to avoid the risk that the sacrifice to which you are willing to consent would not be wasted.

Is it acceptable, for example, that roughly three years after the liberation, France, which used to produce 80 to 90 million hectolitres of wheat and export part of it, has not been able to grow enough wheat for her domestic consumption and furthermore will, following the 1947 harvest, use only 15 million hectolitres for food consumption, the reminder being reserved as seed for the next crop? Is it acceptable that in Italy the rice harvest has been threatened with complete disaster by the strike? I could quote other examples in these countries.

The explanation for these hindrances is quite simple. In several European countries the efforts being made for recovery are constantly being stopped or counteracted by the Communist Party. What, then, is the object of sending food, coal, raw materials, etc., to these countries if the benefit is to be destroyed or minimized by more and more strikes, less and less working hours, and so forth?

SO, DO YOU not really think, America, that your Government should set more forcefully in stating to the French people, for example, the following, "We Americans are in every way willing and eager to help you in the restoration of your country irrespective of the time it might take, but ask you by any means you find appropriate to take every step to avoid strikes or stoppages and to boost the working time."

Most of the French workers are not Communist and if they belong to the CGT (General Confederation of Workers which is 100 per cent Communist) it is only because they can not avoid being registered in the organization; otherwise they couldn't get a job. Most of the French realize that if at the liberation the first government they had—which had the strength to do it—had taken certain measures with the aim of increasing working time, limiting the right to strike, and of permitting w o r k e r s who wanted to work to be able to do so, France I am sure, would have presently recovered and the French people would have a decent living.

LET ME also suggest that at least by propaganda the American Government do something to permit the French people to learn what you, America, have done, what you are doing and what you intend doing for them. Remember the huge propaganda campaign made last year in France by the Communist Party when the Russians (shortly before an election) agreed to send to France a certain quantity of wheat which, finally, was ridiculously little and mostly composed of barley.

Remember, also, that when the first ship loaded with Russian wheat arrived at Marseilles, one of the members of the French government—in which the Communists had five departments—went there and presided at the tremendous demonstration which had been organized for that occasion by the same Communist Party. Remember, too, that to permit the workingmen to attend that demonstration a general work stoppage had been ordered at the request of the Communist Party, which insisted on the other hand that the workers be paid as though t h e y had effectively worked.

Why couldn't the American Government start and underwrite the expense of a daily or at least a weekly American newspaper written in French and printed, if possible, in France, which in order to secure a large circulation, could be sold at a price slightly lower than the other newspapers?

Matter Of Fact

Memo For Henry Wallace

VIENNA.—Here in this great and once lovely city the Soviet Union has launched upon a venture of economic imperialism of really unparalleled crassness and ruthlessness. Furthermore, the ultimate purpose is to enthrall a civilized, innocent and angrily unwilling people, who stand among the founders of Western civilization.

This is the real meaning of the problem of German assets in Austria about which the experts have already written so much. Since the drama of this strange situation has somehow been lost in transmission, an inexpert explanation seems worth trying.

Very briefly, the Soviets were granted at Potsdam all "German assets" in Austria in part payment of their greedy bill for reparations. Those were the days when even the makers of American policy had not learned from hard experience that it was vain to seek a true settlement with the Soviet Union at this time. Under the delusion which a few still cherish, they granted Stalin this concession among many others. They even did so without spelling out what was granted.

Thereafter, under the guise of taking reparations, the Soviet command here seized control of almost every valuable piece of industrial property in their zone of Austria. Eastern Austria, occupied by the Soviets except for the little quadripartite enclave in Vienna, was the country's chief industrial area.

Altogether, they took more than 300 industrial plants of all kinds, plus such banks as they could lay their hands on, the Danube Shipping Co., the Zistersdorf oil wells and tens of thousand of acres of farmland. Definition of "German assets" was miraculously broad. It even included some property actually American owned, such as the American interest in vital Zistersdorf oil resources.

NOR WAS this all. Totally incredible as it may seem, the Soviets blandly announced, in the recent fruitless meetings of the Austrian Treaty Commission, that they were the owners of Austrian roads. The Nazis had constructed autobahnen in Austria after the anschluss. The Soviet negotiator, Novikov, had the marvelous gall to claim that both these roads and the land underlying them belonged to the Soviet Union. By the same token he laid claim to a number of public buildings. But as a gesture of infinite generosity he offered to trade off these roads and buildings against stock in industrial plants which even the Soviets could not call German.

In total, the property thus claimed by the Soviets is valued at between 700 and 800 million dollars. If it remains in their hands, it will give them control of key sectors of the Austrian economy. It is an immense weapon of leverage, both to force Austria into her destined place in a Soviet-dominated Danube Valley, and in the long run to add political subjection to economic domination. The management of the Soviet properties has been carefully planned for this purpose. Except for the Danube Shipping Co. and the oil wells, all the industrial plants have been gathered into a single gigantic h o l d i n g company, U.S.I.V.A.

(U.S.I.V.A. might well repay investigation by the American Soviet sympathizers who are always seeing cartels under the bed.) And political use is already beginning. In the food riots last May, many of the demonstrators were workmen in Soviet plants given time off for the purpose.

FINALLY, in order to perpetuate this system, the Soviets are refusing to sign an Austrian treaty until they have been granted economic extraterritoriality in Austria. What they want would have brought the blush to the cheek of the British in the period of the opium war. They insist that their holdings and the "profits" therefrom must be untouchable by the Austrian state. And when a s k e d to define "profits" for the Austrian Treaty Commission, Novikov blandly declared that his government would tell the Austrian government what the word meant later on.

The Americans and British at Moscow and in the sessions of the Treaty Commission firmly rejected any Austrian treaty including this kind of open threat to Austria's independence. Thus there is no treaty and the cruel and crippling occupation continues.

Leading Austrians like Chancellor Figl and Foreign Minister Gruber are ready to risk granting about one third of the Soviet economic demands in order to terminate the Soviet military occupation. Indeed, the Austrians felt that Gen. Mark Clark was far too unwilling to negotiate in Moscow.

But neither in the sittings of the Treaty Commission, nor in the direct but informal Soviet-Austrian talks, have the Soviets shown the slightest sign of abating their demands. Thus far, their position is that of Shylock. Austria is being held to ransom for a Soviet pound of flesh which will kill her if she yields it. Under the circumstances it seems a trifle puzzling that our Henry Wallaces should bleat like so many heifers over the American air bases in Iceland.

The Federal Diary

Marshall Plan Would Create Jobs

THOUSANDS of new Federal jobs would be created both here and abroad to carry out the Marshall Plan to aid Europe if it's approved by Congress, a top planner yesterday revealed to this reporter.

Kluttz

The official said half a dozen old-line departments and agencies would be forced to expand their staffs even though a new and independent agency is set up to administer the aid plan.

The personnel officers of several agencies are reported to be going over the old files of the War Production Board, Office of Price Administration and other war agencies to get a line on people who might be hired to work on the Marshall Plan.

The Commerce Department already has brought back three former top OPA officials to temporarily advise Secretary Harriman on the domestic price structure as it relates to the Marshall Plan. These officials are:

James F. Brownlee, former deputy OPA administrator for price, who also served in the old Office of Economic Stabilization; Henry M. Hart, jr., former associate general counsel of OPA, and Richard H. Field, former OPA general counsel and assistant administrator.

Brownlee is the director of several large corporations. Both Hart and Field are professors at the Harvard Law School.

The Administration is reported to be lining up people who know how to allocate steel, grain, lumber and coal among other scarce goods, as well as a top administrative staff to run the proposed new agency to handle the Marshall Plan.

THESE are the old-line agencies officials believe would be expanded under the aid program:

The Interior Department to allocate supplies of oil, gas and coal. Something similar to its Solid Fuels Administration for War and its Petroleum Administration for War would have to be set up to do the job.

The Agriculture Department to buy food through its Commodity Credit Corporation for shipments abroad.

The Treasury Department to buy all other relief and aid items through its Bureau of Federal Supply. Also, its staff of international fiscal exports would be expanded to study fiscal problems of foreign nations.

The Commerce Department to handle a broader program of export controls.

The Army and Navy to handle shipments overseas.

And finally, the State Department, which will want to see that the aid plan is carried out in line with its foreign policy. It is already building up a big list of possible new employes just in case Congress orders it to administer the Marshall Plan.

Federal officials are deeply concerned over being able to hire competent people to work on the European reconstruction program. In fact, a number of former Government people who have been approached are reported to have rejected in strong terms any and all possibilities to return here. Some of these wanted to stay in Government work when they were here with the war agencies but they weren't given the opportunity. Low Federal salaries are said to be another factor in the refusals.

A new report of the President's Council of Economic Advisers is reported to emphasize that administration of the Marshall Plan must be on the highest possible level to make it successful.

It's possible that the Administration will suggest to Congress that jobs under the Marshall Plan be taken out from under the Civil Service system and the Classification Act (which fixes salaries) in an effort to make them more attractive.

NAVY: Pay raises for its 12,000 per diem employes in the Washington area will be announced soon, a spokesman revealed yesterday. The Navy has ordered raises ranging from 14 to 17 cents an hour for its 80,000 West Coast per diem employes. An official said the increase for East Coast employes would be "somewhat smaller." The raise here is expected to average around 12 cents an hour.

VETERANS: Chairman Ed Rees of the House Civil Service Committee, said yesterday the Government is firing more veterans than it is hiring. The veterans, he said, "who were promised and who have every right to expect job security, are feeling the full brunt of the reduction-in-force programs of the agencies."

In the first nine months of this year, Rees said, 48,586 fewer veterans were hired than fired.

Rees assumes that every veteran who left the Federal service was fired. As a matter of fact, the vast majority of them resigned voluntarily.

PEOPLE: Lester L. Evans retires today as assistant personnel director of the Federal Works Agency after 34 years of Government service . . . Edgar W. Horad, a 48-year-old Negro, today will receive a cash award of $125 for a suggestion that will save his agency, the Census Bureau, about $4300 a year. His will be the largest award made by Census . . . At the Budget Bureau, Sam Adams has been appointed personnel officer.

TIME OFF: Federal workers whose offices are around the Treasury Building will be excused at 4 p. m. next Friday to attend a Community Chest rally on the Treasury grounds. Speakers will be General Eisenhower, Treasury Secretary Snyder and other notables.

NOTES: Simon & Schuster, the New York publishers, will publish thousands of copies of the report of the President's Civil Rights Committee to sell for $1 each . . . The Navy Department last year paid 6072 of its employes $218,056 for time and money-saving suggestions. Its program is the best in Government . . . Student assistant jobs in the Treasury Department have been exempted from Civil Service. However, the students can't be paid more than $832 a year and they can't work longer than 90 days.

The Gallup Poll

Voter Survey Shows 5 Major Complaints Against Russia

This is the last of three reports analyzing American public attitudes toward Russia.

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 30.—The average American voter has at least five major grievances to voice against Russia.

Henry A. Wallace recently suggested that Stalin and President Truman meet to discuss Russian-American relations and to present each other with a list of grievances to be aired. The Russian people no doubt have a good many complaints against the United States. So far as the American people are concerned, the five main things wrong with Russia are as follows, judging by an extensive public opinion survey by the Institute.

1. That Russia is trying to dominate or rule the world.
2. That Communists working in the interests of Russia would destroy the Christian religion if they could. The so-called "cold war" between the United States and Russia has some of the aspects of a holy war.
3. That Russia's refusal to allow travelers and visitors behind the "iron curtain" is an unfriendly act—that the tight veil of secrecy drawn around her activities probably indicates hostile intentions toward us.
4. That Moscow has seized working control of many satellite states by illegal means.
5. That Russian failure to cooperate is hurting the United Nations.

OPINION throughout the United States was tested on the following questions:

As you hear and read about Russia these days, do you believe Russia is trying to build herself up THE ruling power of the world, or is Russia just building up protection against being attacked in another war?"

Ruling power	76%
Protection	18
No opinion	6

Do you think Communists would destroy the Christian religion if they could?

Yes	72%
No	15
No opinion	13

As you know, very few people are allowed to enter or visit Russia. Why do you think Russia is so secretive?

Principal answers: (1) She is hiding something, preparing for war, keeping secrets for military and security reasons; (2) she doesn't want the world to know anything about what she's doing; Russians are secretive by nature and always will be; (3) she's afraid to show her poverty and weakness; (4) she doesn't want her people to know about the outside world because they might become discontented.

Which of the following nations, if any, does Russia control today—that is, which of these countries are satellites of Russia?

	Yes	No	No opin.
Poland?	78%	5%	15%
Yugoslavia?	74	5	19
Czechoslovakia?	69	8	21
Hungary?	67	9	22
Albania?	55	12	31
Finland?	51	27	20
Norway?	14	53	31
Sweden?	8	64	26

The figures total 98 per cent in each instance because 2 per cent said no country is a Russian satellite.

How would you say Russia has gained control of these countries?

Principal answers: (1) by force, power, conquest or intimidation; (2) by infiltration; (3) by setting up puppet governments.

Do you think the split between Russia and the United States will affect the United Nations—that is, will it help it, hurt it, or will it make no difference?

Help	6%
Hurt	72
No difference	16

Do you think that Russia will leave the United Nations?

Yes	42%

What Russia Poll Series Has Shown

The Gallup Poll series of three reports on what America thinks of Russia, based on a survey covering many aspects, has brought out the following facts:

1. Opposition to Russia is coming not merely from "Wall Street interests" or "reactionary" capitalists, as Russia contends, but to an almost equal extent from the working people of the United States. The wealthy and the "proletariat" think pretty much alike on Russia.

2. Support for State Department policy toward Russia is widespread among the people.

3. Major grievances which the American people have against Russia is out to dominate the world, that Communists would destroy Christianity if they could, that Russian secrecy is an unfriendly act which may cloak hostile activities, that Moscow has seized control of satellite nations by unjustified means, and that Russian failure to cooperate is weakening the United Nations.

U. S. Halts Shipment of Horses To Hungary as Senators Object

By the United Press

The Army indicated last night that it would agree to a State Department request to hold up plans to ship 130 thoroughbred horses to Hungary pending an investigation by Senators Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) and Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.).

Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia had protested the wartime seizure of the animals, but Stewart angrily denounced the State Department's willingness to return them as a "policy of appeasement."

"This damned Communist government has taken over in Hungary and wants the horses back," he said.

The two lawmakers sent a joint letter to Assistant Secretary of State Charles E. Saltzman asking that the shipmen be delayed until they can arrange a congressional inquiry.

State Department officials relayed the Stewart-Morse request to the Army, which is preparing the horses for shipment, and officials there said that it probably would be granted.

Calls German Loot

The Senators said in their letter: "We have decided to request the State Department formally, by means of this letter, to postpone the shipment until we can present the matter to the Armed Services Committee of the Senate."

On October 10 Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia protested that the animals were looted from their citizens by the Germans. The State Department said the Hungarian claim was proper and that the first shipment of 130 would leave on November 1 from New Orleans for Trieste.

Stewart said that he and Morse had information that the horses were captured by the American Army "in actual combat." He added that shipment of the Hungarian horses to this country at the end of the war was agreed to by the Hungarian government then in power.

Stewart Fears Soviet Benefit

"Now this damned Communist government has taken over in Hungary and wants the horses back," Stewart said.

"If we let the Hungarians have the horses now it simply means that Russia will get them. The Russians took a lot of Hungarian horses that have never been accounted for."

The Morse-Stewart letter expressed the belief that shipment of the horses to Hungary would set a precedent for claims by Italy, Poland, Yugoslavia, and "possibly some other countries."

The President's Calling List

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday had the following appointments:

12:15 p. m.—Chairman Basil O'Connor of American National Red Cross, with Dr. Frederick Douglas Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute.

12:30—Secretary of State Marshall with Undersecretary Lovett.

Bowler, 92, Decides To Learn New Tricks

Wayland, Mass. (U.P.)—George Carter, who is 92, doesn't put much faith in the old saw about teaching elderly dogs new tricks.

After bowling with different teams for about 70 years, Carter decided this year to change his bowling grip.

"Ball curved to the left too much and hurt my average," he explained. "Trying to get it over more to the right because I came down to 80 last year."

Carter, who doesn't weigh 100 pounds, soaking wet, once held the duck pin record for a three-string score of 693. That was his favorite games.

"With duckpins you could control the ball better," he recalled.

NAPOLEON

72 Md. Schools to Be Started By June, Costing $19,000,000

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—Governor Lane disclosed today the State expected 72 new school buildings, to cost more than 19 million dollars, would be under construction before the end of the school year.

In reviewing the status of the educational program before Maryland school teachers at the Fifth Regiment Armory, the Governor noted more than 10 million dollars in contracts involving 32 buildings had been let.

He added, however, "to do the job of providing educationally adequate school facilities throughout the State will require the expenditure of from 130 million dollars to 150 million dollars.

Several Years for Job

"It will take several years to do this job, but the 1947 General Assembly already has authorized construction bond issues for schools in the counties and Baltimore City to the amount of 64 million dollars."

He said if the State is to meet its obligation to children, "we must provide for them public education commensurate with the demands that will be made upon them" in the competitive world of tomorrow.

Some 5000 school teachers, principals and administrators began arriving for the eightieth congress of the State Teachers Association. Harry Frank, president of the Association, presided at the representative assembly of 300 delegates.

Many Teachers Enroll

The Governor reported State teachers colleges had the highest freshman enrollment in 10 years, and said under present plans the State would need approximately 3000 in teachers' colleges to meet the demand for personnel from year to year.

Nine counties and Baltimore City, he said, have followed the State's lead in increasing teachers' salaries.

In the counties alone, he said, 1100 new teachers were employed in September, and "more than 900 were fully qualified." The others were close to qualification.

School Loan Asked For Anne Arundel

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—A seven-million-dollar school improvement loan for Anne Arundel County was supported today to Justin G. Bach, representing the Citizens Protective Association, at a hearing before the county commissioners.

He urged the commissioners to supervise the building program so that funds would be distributed properly throughout the county.

A bill to authorize the loan will be presented at the special session of the General Assembly next Wednesday.

Dentistry by Radio Tried in Australia

Canberra, Australia, Oct. 30 (U.P.) Rowley James, Laborite member of Parliament whose home is in Newcastle, 300 miles from Canberra, paused in the middle of a debate on a bill for nationalization of banks today and turned to microphones over which parliamentary proceedings are broadcast to the nation.

Calling his dentist by name, James said: "Milton, if you are lithening, get my teeth ready for thith weekend."

D. C. Reopens Bunch Death Inquest at Fay Request

Coroner Calls New Witneses To Testify on Wednesday

Reopening of the coroner's inquest into the post-arrest death of John Forrest Bunch "to consider new evidence" was announced yesterday by District Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy.

The action was taken at request of United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who declared such public proceeding more "desirable" than presentation of the case to a Federal grand jury.

Dr. Murphy set reconvening for 10 a. m. Wednesday at the District Morgue for the hearing of "additional witnesses" and possible recall of former witnesses "if that is found necessary." The same jury returned a verdict of accidental death at the original inquest August 13.

Died in Hospital

Bunch, a 64-year-old carpenter, died August 4 in Gallinger Hospital where he had been taken from confinement in a Ninth Precinct police cell. Relatives later demanded a probe of circumstances preceding his death.

Since then, the police, the Department of Justice and the family's attorney have conducted separate and extensive investigations, all of which were reported completed yesterday.

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday told a press conference he had "received particulars" on the case from Justice Department investigators but was "not prepared at this time to make comment." The findings, he said, have been turned over to the department's criminal division "for consideration."

"It is to be noted that no warrant of arrest has been issued or requested," declared Fay, in his letter to the coroner's office requesting reopening of the inquest.

"However, wide publicity has been given to the matter, which has undoubtedly resulted in speculation on the part of the public as to what the facts are and whether prosecutive action can and should be taken.

"Under these circumstances, it seems to me desirable that the case be heard fully and heard under conditions where all the witnesses can be required to reveal publicly and under oath their entire knowledge of the case."

The District attorney pointed out that he could still turn the matter over to a grand jury "even if the coroner's jury does not hold anyone for the action of the grand jury." But, he said, the public "is entitled to know the facts."

15 to 20 New Witnesses Likely

He pointed out that while grand juries represent the public "all proceedings are private, secret and confidential" and the public is informed only of actions taken.

The District Attorney would not comment on results of the investigation but it was understood that some 15 to 20 witnesses not heard at the original inquest would be summoned. Most of these were persons present in the police cellblock or at the hospital preceding Bunch's death.

Bunch died six days after his arrest on an intoxication charge. While under confinement, he was taken once to Gallinger Hospital, returned to his police cell, and later that same day was taken to the hospital a second time. An autopsy disclosed a fractured skull and two brain hemorrhages.

Frank Paul Regan, 40, a dishwasher also under arrest at that time on an intoxication charge, later signed a statement that he saw Bunch suffer three convulsions in his cell within a 2-hour period. His call for help for Bunch were unanswered by police, Regan said.

Tuck Studies Merging Two Va. Hospitals

Finances of State Institutions Cause Revival of Plan

Richmond, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Governor Tuck disclosed today that he is studying a proposal calling for the merger of the hospitals and medical schools of the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia—a move advocated and defeated in 1922.

The Governor told a press conference that it was "highly probable that the merger would have been ordered" in 1922 if the general assembly had "forseen the present financial difficulties" of the two institutions.

Governor Explains

Asked if merger proposals had been brought before him, the Governor said:

"A merger of the two institutions has been advocated before. A sharp controversy over such a proposal occurred in the early 1920's. A bill was introduced in the General Assembly, and a commission appointed to consider the matter.

The commission submitted majority and minority reports and the proposal was defeated. A special appropriation of $20,000 for one year and $15,000 the next was made to aid the Medical College of Virginia through temporary financial difficulties.'

Financial Difficulties

"Had the General Assembly in 1922 foreseen the present financial difficulties, not only of the Medical College of Virginia Hospital, but the University of Virginia Hospital as well, it seems highly probable that the merger would have been ordered. The special contribution the State made in the early period pales into insignificance beside the staggering deficits which are now in prospect at both of the hospitals.

"To pay off these deficits the State is asked to appropriate in the next budget about one million dollars; and to provide for the continued operation of these two hospitals, about $3,700,000 more. This is an increase in requests over appropriations for 1946-48, exclusive of the deficits of more than two million dollars. For the biennium 1922-24, the State appropriation for this purpose was only $186,740."

Constitution Vote in Va. Set Next Fall

Proposed Changes Must Be Adopted Again by Assembly

Richmond, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Proposed amendments to 14 sections of the Virginia constitution have been advertised widely in State papers in recent weeks, in advance of the general election next Tusday, but citizns will not vote on these proposals November 4, the clerk of the House of Delegates said today.

Some confusion has arisen about whether constitutional amendments are subject to a referendum this year.

Colonel E. Griffith Dodson, clerk of the House, said publication of the proposed amendment is required by the constitution. The resolution were adopted by the General Assembly at its 1946 session, but must be re-adopted by the 1948 session before they are presented to the voters in a statewide referendum in November, 1948.

The idea of the interim publication is to inform the public of the proposed changes, so candidates subject to next week's election may be questioned on the proposals.

The series of constitutional amendments is designed to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, to provide for a literacy test at the time of registration, to close regisration books four months prior to an election as far as that election is concerned, to permit the general assembly to levy a school tax up to $3 per year on every adult redent, to abolish the perfunctory committee on special, private and local legislation in the House and Senate, and to permit the consolidation of two or more counties and cities into a single school district.

Alfred L. Hawkins To Die Today for Slaying of Clerk

Alfred L. Hawkins, 23-year-old slayer of a Safeway grocery clerk, will go to his death in the District Jail's electric chair some time after 10 a. m. today.

Hawkins yesterday was refused a stay of execution by the Supreme Court.

Jail officials, describing Hawkins' attitude as "good," said he expressed no surprise when informed of the high court's decision.

His victim, John Paul Knight, was shot and killed as he walked toward the store door with an armload of groceries the night of April 17 during Hawkins' holdup attempt.

Hawkins' accomplice in the slaying, Laurence I. Prout, was convicted with him, but his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by President Truman.

Press Conference Off

President Truman decided yesterday to forego his weekly news conference today so he could have more time for work on his message to the November 17 special session of Congress on inflation curbs and European aid.

Tideland Oil Stipulations Made To Protect U.S., Clark Explains

By The Associated Press

Attorney General Clark said yesterday that stipulations which he and Interior Secretary Krug entered into with California in the tidelands case were designed to protect the Government's oil off the California coast and "show good faith" with the State government.

Clark, discussing the tidelands case in which the Supreme Court entered a final decree this week, indorsed the statement of Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, that the stipulations continue in full force and effect, notwithstanding the court's action in holding them irrevelant to the case before it. The court last summer ruled that the Federal Government holds "paramount rights" over the bottom of the sea off California, from the ordinary low water mark to the three-mile limit.

This ruling was made final last Monday.

In the interim, the Justice Department, Interior Department and Fred M. Howser, California Attorney General, reached agreement on the format of the final decree and also entered into two stipulations.

One of these exempts the bay areas of San Francisco, San Diego and San Pedro from the Government's proprietary claim, and the other provides that oil wells now in operation off the coast under leases granted by California should continue to operate until final measurements set up the exact lines between State and Federal jurisdictions. The royalties are being held in trust pending this determination.

Asked about criticism of the stipulations, Clark said the exemptions for the bay areas were well established in law and that provision for continued oil withdrawals was designed to protect the Government's interest.

"If we stopped the wells," he said, "the wells would be severely damaged, as every oil man knows. Further, the country needs the oil which they are producing.

"We lose nothing on the stipulations. We gain by them. The continued production of oil on the California coast is protecting our holdings there.

"The stipulations remain in effect until September 30 of next year, unless Congress takes other action before then. The Congress will decide on the permanent method of operation."

Clark declined to say what the government may do with respect to other coastal States with oil or oil prospects in tideland areas.

Clark gave out copies of a letter sent yesterday to President Truman concerning the tidelands case. This letter said in part:

"In presenting its arguments to the Supreme Court the government had consistently asserted that it was making no claim to bays, harbors and inland waters.

"I am reporting to you on these stipulations in some detail because their provisions and effect have been misunderstood. The fact is that the stipulation on operations was necessary to conserve the oil supplies and prevent enormous wastage and loss.

"Congress is now in a position to determine how the assets which have been declared to be the property of the United States shall be administered."

Joint Study On Zoning To Be Made

Arlington and Alexandria Reach Agreement With National Park Unit

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission concluded an agreement yesterday with officials of Arlington County and Alexandria looking toward coordination of zoning policies.

Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, 3d, NCPPC chairman, said after an afternoon meeting that a joint committee to study, and possibly revise, zoning standards will be formed.

A similar group will be created for water resources and sewage disposal problems.

Plaza Development Favored

Such committees, already in existence in connection with highways and airports, is part of an effort to improve planning policy and to obtain cooperation within the Metropolitan area in preparing Washington's comprehensive plan.

Meeting at the same time, the Fine Arts Commission decided that the Great Plaza on 14th st. between Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw., should be developed appropriately "without delay."

Improvement of the plaza as a landscaped area—at present one of the largest downtown parking lots—it holds 1150 cars—was planned originally with construction of the Commerce and Labor Department buildings, but was never executed.

Early Action Not Expected

The possibility that thousands of motorists may be deprived of their parking spaces within the next few years appeared remote. Public Building Administration officials indicated such a project would have to come after completion of other, high-priority projects, particularly with congressional appropriations for construction so meager and infrequent.

Plans for the Federal courthouse authorized by Congress for erection at Constitution ave. and 3d st. nw., received tentative approval of FAC.

Architect Louis Justement submitted the courthouse design. It calls for a "monumental" building five stories high—the same height as the new Public Library nearby.

In announcing the proposed joint committee to handle general zoning policy in Arlington and Alexandria, Grant said the NCPPC felt "this is a good time to make such studies," because of great wartime shifts in population. He emphasized that the authority for actual zoning and hearing of petitions will continue with the local zoning bodies. The new group will be concerned with standards mostly, recommending, for example, which areas might be rezoned for higher population densities.

Last Full Report in 1932

Grant said the first two chapters of the commission's comprehensive plan for Washington is expected to be written by the beginning of January. The last full report was issued in 1932.

The commission referred to its staff the set of proposals for remodeling of Barney cir. at Sousa Bridge and for construction of a "grade separation" underpass at Constitution and Pennsylvania aves. nw.

After hearing a progress report from Col. William H. Cary, director of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering, the commission decided to go ahead with a survey of the area from Marshall Heights to Barry Farms in Southeast Washington. Cary's staff is determining its boundaries as a possible "blighted area."

Traffic Death Toll for U. S. Is Under 1946

The Nation's traffic toll is running slightly under fatalities a year ago, the National Safety Council announced in Chicago yesterday.

But the council expressed doubt that the 1947 death figure could be held below the 33,700 highway dead of last year, pointing out that the year's most dangerous driving months are still ahead.

Washington, with 60 deaths attributed to traffic thus far this year as against 50 at this time last year, did not contribute to the decrease nationally.

Virginia and Maryland, however, were included in the list of 31 States showing decreases in traffic fatalities. Virginia showed a 16 per cent drop and Maryland six per cent.

The nine-month toll over the Nation is 23,200.

On the basis of traffic deaths per 10,000 registered vehicles in cities of over 500,000, Milwaukee's 3.6 led the Nation. Buffalo, N. Y., with 3.8, was second and Cleveland's 3.9 was third.

Traffic Director George E. Kenaipp pointed out that while the Washington toll thus far this year is 60, it is the third best year since the department began keeping records in 1923.

He reiterated his contention that the fatality ratio should be based on population only or on mileage traveled by vehicles in a city (based on gasoline consumption records). He emphasized the fact that many automobiles which use Washington streets daily are registered in Virginia and Maryland.

Washington's 7.1 death rate in cities of over 500,000 helped it win the National Safety Council's Grand Award for 1946. The death rate based on registration of vehicles was 4.8.

GOP Leader Charged in Auto Death

Fred A. Bryan Of Fairfax Faces Mandatory Charge Of Homicide

Fred A. Bryan, Fairfax County Republican chairman, was charged with homicide yesterday following an inquest into the traffic death of Lemuel B. Morris, former Republican candidate for county supervisor from the Providence district.

Morris died Monday of injuries he suffered in a collision while riding in an automobile driven by Bryan Saturday. They were returning to Morris' McLean home from a political meeting.

Charge Is Mandatory

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Lytton Gibson said Bryan's attorney had promised that his client would appear at police headquarters today to accept service of the warrant and to post $1000. The homicide charge is mandatory in a warrant, Gibson said, but only a verdict of involuntary manslaughter will be sought.

Preliminary hearings has been set for December 3, Gibson said to allow one witness to recover from injuries.

Trial Justice Harry Carrico stated that a previous charge against Bryan og drunken driving, made after the accident, has been continued indefinitely.

Head-On Collision

Five witnesses testified at the inquest that just after the accident, in which Bryan collided almost head-on with a car driven by William C. Foster, they smelled alcohol on Bryan's breath.

Foster said the car driven by Bryan weaved from one side of the road to the other as it approached him. Investigating officer Joseph J. Howard testified that Bryan's car had been almost entirely on the left side of the center line at the point of impact.

Witnesses also spoke of two women passengers in Bryan's car who disappeared before police arrived. Bryan' attorney refused to identify them, but said "they will be produced at the proper time."

Takoma Park Doctor Hurt in Collision

Dr. G. B. Queen, 38, a Takoma Park, Md., physician who lives at 112 Willow ave., suffered numerous injuries yesterday when the car he was driving collided head-on with a dump truck on East-West Highway at Maple st., Chevy Chase.

He was admitted at Suburban Hospital with head, back and knee injuries and hospital officials described his condition as "good."

Police said the operator of the truck was Jessie M. Givens, 22, of 116 Rumney st. ne. He was charged with reckless driving by Bethesda police and committed to jail in default of collateral or bond, police said.

Sugar Price Control Ends At Midnight

Price controls on sugar, the first commodity rationed or controlled, will be lifted at midnight tonight.

Dealers warned that if a run developed as result of heavy buying by housewives, grocers would have no alternative but to increase prices for a short period until the market settled back to normal.

Allen DeFord, District sugar broker, declared bluntly, "There is absolutely no basis for current rumors that sugar is scarce or that there will be great increase in the price of sugar, if any increase at all."

A local representative of a large sugar refinery took a similar position. He said that "current supplies, including Cuban, domestic, beet and cane sugar, are more than enough to meet the demand for a long time. In addition, large crops are due for harvest in February."

Officials of chain and independent stores here foresaw no real shortage of granulated sugar or the specliaty types such as confectionary or brown. They said grocers were adequately supplied and were not planning any increases when the controls are lifted.

In Chicago, however, J. Frank Grimes, president of the Independent Grocers Alliance, predicted a temporary increase of three to five cents. At present, sugar is seling at 45 to 50 cents for five-pound sacks in Greater Washington.

School Survey To Be Discussed In Montgomery

A proposed survey of school trends in Montgomery County will be discussed by the executive committee of the county's Council of Parent-Teacher Associations tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of the council secretary, Mrs. Lawrence Vaughan, in Bethesda.

The survey proposal emerged from a county-wide workshop held at Rockville last Saturday under the council's sponsorship, according to Nathan R. Gilbert of Chevy Chase, council chairman. Gilbert said participants in the workshop had pointed out that a survey made during the past two years has already become obsolete because of the county's growth.

Head D. C. Mail Clerk Retires After 39 Years of Service

Stephen B. Lddane, 70-year-old chief District mail clerk, will retire today after 39 years of municipal service.

His coworkers in the Tax Collector's office will present him with a $100 bond at a party in his honor this afternoon in the District Building.

Lddane says he plans to devote his time to rest and relaxation, with a little fishing and card-playing thrown in for good measure. An ardent baseball fan, he expects to attend a number of the Washington Senators' games next season.

He began his District career in 1908 as a coupon clerk in the Tax Collector's office. (This was the same year the District Government occupied its "new" headquarters—the present District Building.)

His career included six years as deputy tax collector prior to taking over his present duties.

"Washington has greatly improved during the time," he said, reviewing his 39-year term of District employment. He said he was particularly impressed with the growth of the city during that time. "When I began," he said, "we issued about 18,000 dog tags a year. Now we issue more than 36,000. That gives you an idea of how the city's grown."

A native of Rockville, Md., Lyddane operated a Rockville grocery for two years and served as Montgomery County collector of taxes for four years before becoming a District employe.

He lives at 3100 Connecticut ave. nw. A son, Fracis S. Lyddane, is employed by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. A daughter, Mrs. Sarah Emery, lives at Hartford, Conn.

50,000 See Hagerstown Mummers

Two-Hour Parade Is Staged Again In Prewar Style

The annual Alsatia Mummers parade in Hagerstown, Md., like its old self last night after a slack time due to war and shortages.

Undaunted by rain which fell all afternoon but stopped at parade time, the procession unfolded all kinds of costumed, marchers, floats and musical groups for two hours before some 50,00 people. The event was sponsored by the Alsatia Mummers Club.

Leading the parade was the Alsatia Mummers Club float, adorned by Miss Loretta Jean Hartman, Miss Hagerstown of 1947. Altogether, there were in the parade over a dozen major floats, sponsored by commercial and civic groups.

Twenty-five thousand dollars, put up by citizens and merchants of the town, was awarded last night as prizes for best group presentation and costumes.

Union Officer Ousted; Won't Sign Affidavit

The CIO Utility Workers of America yesterday sacked a member of its executive board because of his failure to execute an anti-Communist affidavit.

The action, taken by a trial committee of the remaining members of the executive board, was to protect some 30 cases brought by the union and now pending before the National Labor Relations Board.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, union officers are required to execute the oaths in order to avail themselves of the NLRB's services and the processes of the law. The NLRB, by its own regulations, set tonight midnight as the deadline date for the affidavits on pain of throwing out all old cases still before them.

Steelworkers May Sign

In other action yesterday relating to the same provision and tonight's deadline:

1. The CIO Telephone Workers Organizing Committee announced that its officers and members of its executive board would sign the required affidavits. One of its component organizations, the American Union of Telephone Workers, has several cases before the NLRB which it wishes to protect.

2. The NLRB indicated that it would grant extensions of its deadline for another 30 days, on a union-by-union basis, to those organizations which have made positive efforts to comply with the requirement but which were unable to meet the time limit.

Utility Union's Action

The action by the Utility Workers involved James L. Daughterty, California regional director and, until yesterday, member of the executive board of the union.

By the union's constitution, members of its board are classified as "officers" within the meaning of the requirement of the Taft-Hartley Act. At its annual convention ending last Sunday, the union voted to comply with the requirement and voted that any officer who refused to sign the oath be removed.

Daugherty did not appear at an executive board meeting here earlier this week to carry out the signing. According to Union Secretary-Treasurer William J. Pachler, Daugherty has on occasion denied he was a Communist. At the convention he opposed signing the affidavits.

Daugherty is one of the first union officers to be fired for refusal to sign the oath. But a month ago, presidents of two locals of the CIO Woodworkers resigned on request after refusing to file the anti-Communist affidavits.

Sales Tax Demanded by Va. Grange

Retail Levy Would Except Only Food, Children's Clothes

Richmond, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Virginia State Grange went on record today as favoring a general retail sales tax on all items except basic foods and children's clothes.

In a resolution adopted at the final session of the organization's annual convention, delegates called on the General Assembly to pass such a tax bill, at the same time urging the law-making body to strive for greater economy and efficiency in State government.

The Grange also gave its approval to these resolutions:

Urging continuation of soil conservation districts, and expressing its favor of retention of soil conservation service under the Department of Agriculture.

Asking State appropriations to Virginia agricultural agencies—such as Virginia Tech, the State Department of Agriculture—large enough so that these agencies "may develop and publicize data relative to the costs of producing various commodities so that the general public may become informed as to the exact status of farmers and their families in the economy of the State.

Stating it "views with increasing concern the international trends tending toward another war" and urging the President, Congress, and all actively concerned with international replations and peace settlements to "govern their activities by the spirit of the golden rule rather than by the dictates of power politics."

Theta Delta Chi Fraternity Marks Anniversary Here

More than 100 undergraduate and alumni members of Theta Delta Chi fraternity celebrated its 100th anniversary at a reunion held in the South American room of the Statler Hotel last night.

Theta Delta Chi was founded at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., in 1847. The local chapter at George Washington University was chartered in 1896 and is the oldest national fraternity represented on the campus.

Among alumni members attending the reunion were Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America; former Minister to Hungary H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, Ernest F. Henry, executive director of Home Builders Association, and Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post.

Ocean City Leads In Marlin Fishing

Ocean City, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Maryland Tidewater News claims Ocean City is the world's greatest port for marlin fishing.

The State publication announced the number of 542 marlin boated here last summer was greater than reported by any other deep sea fishing center. The record marlin for the season weighed 110 pounds.

The past summer was the second for the resumption of marlin fishing out of Ocean City after a four-year suspension because of the war.

Kibler to Be Feted

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Thomas Kibler, retired athletic director, will be guest of honor at the Washington College homecoming football game with Randolph-Macon Saturday. He retired last June after 35 years as Washington College athletic director.

Poultryless Day Stumps 2 Officials of Food Group

Can't Explain Why Observance Is Continued With Supply Abundant

The reason for continuing poultryless Thursday was demanded yesterday at a meeting of the District Citizens Food Conservation Committee and two committee officials admitted they did not know the answer.

J. Thomas Kennedy, District superintendent of weights, measures and markets, who is chairman of the government institutions subcommittee, scored the wisdom of promoting poultryless Thursday and called on the national food committee to explain its position.

Kennedy said he had asked Charles Stfberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young and executive secretary of the committee, for the reason and Stofberg had admitted he did not know. At this point Stofberg turned to the press representatives and smiled, "That's off the record, boys."

(Editor's note: "Off The Record" understandings frequently are enforced at formal press conferences by mutual agreement made in advance between reporters and officials. Statements in open public meetings, asserting that a part of the proceedings are off the record, do not constitute "off the record" matter entitled to this privilege.)

Cauliflower Expected Change

Chairman James E. Colliflower, who was presiding at a meeting of the 21 subcommittee leaders in the District Building, then noted that he, too, could "not understand" why the observance was being continued. He grinned at the audience of 50 persons and commented, "That's off the record."

Colliflower, veteran of several community drives, said he had expected the national committee to lift the poultryless Thursday request last week and was disappointed when it was not done.

"Since they have not done so, it's our job to push it and push it hard," he said.

Clement F. Preller, president of the Central Labor Union, and Sidney Kolker, head of the food division of the committee and a wholesale meat dealer, took the same position. Kolker noted that "poultry is backing up in the warehouses."

Earlier in the meeting, the committee decided to distribute 66,000 gummed 2 by 3 inch food conservation stickers to District residents for placement in the lower right corner of rear auto windows. Colliflower announced that the District Commissioners had authorized the placing of the stickers in that spot during the period from November 1 to January 1, 1948.

Colliflower, acting on a suggestion of A. J. Brylawski, theater operator, said the Inter-Industry Safety Committee of the District, which consists of petroleum, automotive and rubber dealers, will be asked to distribute the stickers to gasoline stations. Attendants will be requested to offer them to motorists and aid in the proper placement.

The stickers read "Save meat, save wheat, save the peace," which is one of the slogans adopted by the national food committee.

Asked to Distribute Posters

In addition, representatives of various groups, including the Federation of Citizens Association, were asked to distribute posters for bulletin boards, homes and schools asking cooperation in the program.

Colliflower announced that Joseph B. Danzansky, general council for the wholesale meat division of Merchants and Manufacturers Association, has been named chairman of a speakers bureau. The bureau will furnish speakers for various Districts meetings and radio programs, he said.

Cooperation of the clergy was suggested by Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of the Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation, in explaining the program to their groups.

A campaign to collect clothing for European relief was announced yesterday. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway, was named chairman of the Washington Area Relief Mobilization, which will collect clothing for shipment to Europe from November 7 to 16.

The program was initiated by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Jewish Community Council.

If You're Locked Out, Don't Call Firemen

The next time you're locked out of your house, citizen, don't call the fire department to set things right. It's against the law.

Municipal Judge Armond Scott impressed this fact yesterday on Miss Frances Thibadeau, 41, as he found her guilty of turning in a false alarm of fire. This is the case Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Kneipp outlined against Miss Thibadeau:

That on October 21, when she found herself locked out of her apartment at 2440 16th st. nw., she called the fire department and asked that a few laddies be hustled over pronto to open up the apartment. That when the fire department seemed laggardly in the matter, she called three more times and hollered fire and please get the trucks moving.

Mrs. Thibadeau said she made only two calls and did not say either time there was a fire.

Police Pvt. S. J. Greco of the Thirteenth Precinct said he went once to Miss Thibadeau's address and advised her to get a locksmith. He returned later, he said, in response to the fire alarm.

Judge Scott set sentencing for November 6. Miss Thibadeau faces a fine of $100.

Asks Charges Be Clarified

Attorneys for Theodore F. Vollten, suspended Montgomery County detective chief, yesterday filed a petition with the chairman of the Police Trial Board asking full particulars on the charges.

Vollten was suspended Tuesday on general charges of inefficiency and an additional charge that he recently ordered a detective corporal to drive him to Anne Arundel County for personal business in a county-owned police car.

Joseph B. and Vivian Sinton, Vollten's attorneys, asked Jo V. Morgan, chairman of the Police Trial Board, to furnish the data so a defense could be prepared before the hearing, scheduled for Wednesday.

Canary Club Show

Every type of canary, finch and parakeet will have its day at the National Capital Canary Club's annual open show at the Hamilton Hotel tomorrow and Sunday.

With 800 entries expected by Henry J. McDermott, president of the club, judging in the various classes will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow, and go on until the best bird in each class and the best in show has been selected. Three trophies, including the C. L. Smith Memorial Trophy, will be awarded. The Smith trophy is awarded to the best "Washington fancy," a white canary with dark wings developed by the club.

Trucker Loses Keys

"Move your . . . truck, buddy, so I can park here," ordered the unidentified driver of an ancient pick-up truck.

"The . . . I will," replied the driver of a Jacob Transfer truck, Edward Harris of 307 T st. nw. "Not until I finish moving this furniture."

So the unidentified trucker snatched the keys to the moving truck and highballed off in his own vehicle, Harris complained to police yesterday. The incident occurred in the 600 block of Rhode Island ave. nw.

Police to Aid Boys Club

The Commissioners yesterday granted permission for police in uniform to aid the Metropolitan Police Boys Club's fund-raising drive by collecting subscription memberships.

(Present District regulations prevent police or firemen from soliciting when in uniform unless specifically authorized to do so by the Commissioners.)

The boys club obtains operating funds from the sale of membership subscriptions. Members of the boys club board of directors told the Commissioners Tuesday that more memberships would be sold if uniformed police took the subscriptions.

Clothes Reported Stolen

Clothes valued at $75 were stolen from her room at 731 R st. nw. early yesterday by a thief with a duplicate or skeleton key, Miss Odessa Wilson complained to police yesterday.

Requests 'Raid' Welcome

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, engineer Commissioner, yesterday called for a warm welcome for air crewmen who will participate in Sunday's mock air raid on Washington.

General Young asked that Washington families invite the airmen for Sunday dinner and entertainment. The invitations will be extended by calling the public information office at the National Guard Armory, EXecutive 2333, extension 5.

The "raid" will be staged as a part of the guard's recruiting campaign and will bring aircraft from Cleveland and Birmingham.

Pants, Register Robbed

Some $14 was rifled from the cash register of his laundry at 911 8th st. se. by a thief who also siphoned $33 from his pants lying on a chair of a second-floor bedroom, Gung Lee, 48, told police yesterday. Lee said he recalled hearing muffled noises about 3 a. m.

Gets Refuse Job

A contract for collection of trash and garbage in Ward 3 in the Town of Bladensburg has been awarded to Lewis E. Brogan, 4610 Edmonston rd., town officials announced yesterday.

Mr. Ruth B. Young, town clerk, said Brogan's bid of $65 a week for the trash collection service was the lowest of five submitted to the town council. Cost of the service will be paid from the general assessment fund, and will not require individual levies from home owners.

Ward 3 consists of the Sunnybrook area, which was taken into the town in September after a referendum in the community.

Anti-Freeze Warnings

Some antifreeze solutions which can cause great harm to automobile engines are back on the market after being barred during the war years, the American Automobile Association warned yesterday.

"Antifreeze solutions made of either a salt base or a petroleum base can do a great deal of damage to your car," said Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the AAA's District Division.

Receives $2000 Damages

A District Court jury yesterday awarded Mrs. Genevieve Lee Cashdan, 5605 Johnson ave., Bethesda, Md., $2000 damage for a broken cheek bone suffered when she was accidently hit by a hockey stick while viewing a match at Uline's arena, November 13, 1945.

The jury also awarded Mrs. Cashdan's husband $1500 for medical expenses he incurred in her behalf.

Plea Under Advisement

Associate Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut yesterday took under advisement a plea for a temporary injunction by a Washington barber to enjoin the District Licensing Board from inforcing a license revocation order. Also taken under consideration was a plea by the corporation council's office for dismssal f a motion for permanent injunction.

The board had ordered revocation of the license of Pat J. Fiordelise proprietor of a barber shop at 1204 New York ave., on the grounds that he had excessively overcharged three servisemen.

Trial Is Recessed

District Court litigation to determine the legally elected officers of the National Women's Party was recessed yesterday until November 10.

The recess was accomplished through agreement of counsel representing the Pollitzer and Mayflower factions, respectively.

Expensive Nick Name

For scratching her nickname several times on the three-day-old paint job of a car owned by a Rockville, Md., resident, Christine Lloyd, 20, of 610 62d pl., Seat Pleasant, Md., was sentenced to 15 days in jail yesterday in Rockville Police Court.

The girl testified she had just had an argument with her boy friend and while still in a huff Saturday night she scratched the foot-high letters K-A-T-T-Y with a bobby pin, thinking it was her boy friend's car.

Court officials said she had already served five days in the jail, though the judges suspended the remaining 10 days conditionally pending restitution of damages.

Frank W. Womach

Suffolk, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Frank Wilson Womach, 56, head of the Dixie Guana Co., died at his home here last night of a heart attack. He was a native of Farmville but had made his home in Suffolk since 1913.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. May Price Womach; a daughter, Miss Betsy Womach, a student at the University of North Carolina; a son, Frank Womach, jr., a student at Lynchburg College, and a brother, E. W. Womach of Bronxville, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Hill Funeral Home here.

Rudolph H. Yeatman, Washington attorney, of 5801 Chevy Chase Parkway, who died October 13, left an estate valued at $65,686, it was revealed in a petition for probate of his will filed in District Court yesterday.

The estate is to be held in trust for Mr. Yeatman's wife, Mary, who is to receive an income of $300 a month from it. Upon her death the residue is to be divided equally among Mr. Yeatman's four sons and two daughters.

$25,000 Suit Filed

Melva A. Wence of 3014 Gainsville st. se. yesterday asked District Court to award her $25,000 damages for injuries she said she received whena parked car rolled down an incline and struck her as she sat in the back yard of her home.

Named defendant in the suit was Robert L. Jones of 2804 Terrace rd. se.

According to the suit, Jones' car was parked at the crest of an incline in the 2800 block of Terrace rd. se., between Gainsville and 31st sts. last August 31 when it rolled down hill, according to the suit, and lurched through the back yard in the rear of the plaintiff's home.

Injury Put D. C. Girl in Wheelchair for Life And Led to Start of Christ Child Society

LESSON FOR BABY SITTERS—Using a doll for a model, Mrs. Alice M. Cameron shows two prospective baby sitters how to "change baby." The youngsters, members of the Specialized Baby Sitters of Christ Child Settlement House, are James Skyrm, 11, of 217 F st. ne., and Gene Fitzgerald, 7, of 424 5th st. ne. The program teaches children how to care for their infant brothers and sisters brought to the settlement house—a Community Chest agency—in the evening while their parents are away from home

Chest-Supported Organization Provides Recreational Programs for 1000 Children

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.,
Post Reporter

This is a story that had its beginning more than 60 years ago.

It begins on a tragic note. A young woman of about 19 is seriously injured in an accident. The injury leaves her hopelessly chained to a wheelchair for life.

Her body could not move from the wheelchair, but her mind and heart could.

She launched an institution in Washington which today, with financial aid from the Community Chest, makes it possible for about 1000 children to enjoy recreational programs and summer camp trips which they might otherwise be denied.

The lady of the wheelchair is Miss Mary Virginia Merrick. The institution is the Christ Child Settlement House, 608 Massachusetts ave. nw.

After her injury, Miss Merrick organized a group of girld friends to make layettes for new-born babies of needy families. In 1891 this group organized the Christ Child Society and that summer did something unprecedented for that day—sent convalescent children to summer camps.

Today there are Christ Child Societies in 32 other American cities and Miss Merrick is president of the National Christ Child Society.

Miss Merrick and her friends began settlement work on a small scale in Washington in the late 1880s but it was not until 1899 that the Christ Child Settlement was founded.

In the early years, because the population of Washington was scattered, the settlement's recreation centers were established in smaller units wherever there was a need to be met. By 1915 there was six different centers. In 1918, however, the work was united in a single settlement house in the 300 block of Indiana ave. nw.

This was headquarters for the settlement until it moved into its modern, three-story brick building home at 608 Massachusetts ave. ne.

The settlement serves about 1000 boys and girls whose ages range from 5 years upward. The boys, who slightly outnumber the girls, are members of the Merrick Boys Club. The girls are simply members of the Christ Child Settlement House.

The settlement has many activities, but one that deserves special mention is the recently formed special baby sitting class which consists of five young boys and girls who are being instructed in the care of baby brothers and sisters.

The children (two of them are boys) are taught how to bathe the babies, change diapers and feed them. Sometimes a doll is used as a model, but often the children bring their baby brothers and sisters to the settlement house and live models are used.

Do the boys mind, you ask?

One of the manswers that question without any frills, giggles or evasions.

"If it's gotta be done, it's gotta be done," he says.

The settlement house program also includes cooking and sewing classes, instructions in arts and crafts, music and dramatics and, of course, athletics. Since 1901 the settlement has operated a dental clinic.

There is a summer camp for the boys at Maryland Point, Md., and one for the girls on the South River near Annapolis.

There is a nominal camp fee, but if the child comes from a family in poor financial circumstances, the settlement pays part or all of the camp fee.

Miss Merrick alert and active in her 80s, is still president of the settlement, but the institution in which she has played such a big part depends almost entirely upon Community Chest dollars for its continued existence.

The settlement costs more than $40,000 a year to operate and the Community Chest contributes about 95 per cent of the total finances.

Special Gifts Chest Total Hits $434,000

—A total of $434,000 has been collected by solicitors of the Special Gifts Unit of the Community Chest Federation campaign, E. Cortlandt Parker, unit chairman, reported yesterday.

Speaking to the unit report luncheon at the Burlington Hotel, 1120 Vermont ave. nw., Parker said the unit had collected 41 per cent of its $1,053,000 quota. He added that the group expected to collect about $500,000 by the early part of next week, and he urged the volunteer solicitors to complete all calls on prospective individuals and corporations by November 7.

"Workers of all five sections in the unit are enthusiastic about the way people are responding to the campaign appeal, Parker said. The Chest campaign army of 18,000 persons is striving to oversubscribe the goal of $3,900,000, in order to meet increasing demands for welfare service."

WORLD'S LARGEST FLORAL CLOCK

The ten thousand colorful plants that make up the face of the largest floral clock in the world can be seen now in the height of their glory. At no other time of the year are these plants seen in such glorious hues. It is only a short time until Jack Frost will wipe out all this profusion of color.

Nursery School Found to Pass Sanitation Tests

The Hite Nursery School meets all Montgomery County sanitation requirements, Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, said yesterday.

And J. Ernest Hawkins, clerk to Montgomery County commissioners, said the school needs only a few adjustments such as relocation of fire extinguishers and removal of mattresses stored in the basement to meet fire safety requirements.

The school has been under fire since a Washington couple several weeks ago withdrew their two children, charging they had been mistreated. The school must obtain health and fire department clearance before filing an application for renewal of its county license.

An official of the county's board of zoning appeals, which also must approve the school before the license is renewed, said yesterday the board had not been contacted so far.

Father's Ingenuity Aids Polio Victim

Lorain, Ohio (U.P.).—A father's ingenuity may help his 10-year-old son recover from infantile paralysis.

Little Eddie Tougas was the city's first polio victim this year.

When the youngster was taken to the hospital, his father, Marcel S. Tougas, heard one of the nurses mention the need of a "shoulder wheel."

The wheel, so constructed that invalided patients may use it, helps strengthen arm and shoulder muscles.

The elder Tougas got busy fashioning such a wheel out of plywood and presented it to the hospital.

Officials there have acclaimed it as the best "wheel" they have seen and say it should be especially helpful to polio victims.

The largest phosphate deposits in the world, estimated at more than 5,000,000,000 metric tons, lie in the beds of phosphate rock along the eastern tier of Idaho.

Archbishop Cantwell Dies In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, October 30 (AP).—Archbishop John J. Cantwell, 72, first archbishop of the Los Angeles Catholic diocese and a long-time advocate of clean movies and literature, died today shortly after his removal to a hospital.

Archbishop Cantwell

At his bedside were his brother, Bishop William Cantwell, and his secretary and long-time friend, Bishop Timothy Manning.

Ill for several days, he succumbed to a throat infection complicated by what a friend said apparently was a stroke.

Born in Limerick, Ireland, December 1, 1874, he had served the church since his ordination as a priest in 1899, mostly in California, where his first post was curate at St. Joseph's Church, Berkeley.

James F. Milton

Va. Teachers' Substandard Permits Rise

More teachers holding substandard certificates will be teaching in Virginia schools this year than last, C. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of public instruction, said yesterday.

Estimates by school division superintendents during the summer had indicated that the situation this year would be remarkably improved.

"I was amazed after the summer checkup to find actual conditions varied so much from the early reports," Miller said.

Yesterday's report showed that 168 more substandard teaching licenses had been issued or applied for by October of this year than in a similar period last year.

Only 1800 Expected

Miller said that the summer survey had led him to believe that only about 1800 emergency certificates and local permits for teaching would be issued in Virginia schools. During the 1946-47 school term 3268 were issued.

For the current term to date 969 emergency licenses and 2015 local permits either have been issued or applied for. In the same period last year 885 emergency licenses and 2031 local permits had been granted or requested. Totals for the comparable dates are 2984 for this year and 2816 a year ago.

Figures released by Miller showed that so far this year 12 substandard certificates have been issued or applied for in Arlington; 63 in Fairfax, 25 in Loudoun and 31 in Prince William.

Alexandria Meets Requirement

All teachers in Alexandria, Charlottesville, Harrisonburg and Williamsburg meet requirements. Three substandard certificates have been granted in Fredericksburg, 4 in Lynchburg, 10 in Richmond, 6 in Staunton, 3 in Winchester and 4 in Waynesboro.

Emergency licenses are issued to teachers having two or more years of college training and no degree. Local permits are granted to those with less than two years' college training or only a high school diploma.

Miller said that the situation will get worse during the school term as teachers drop out and substitutes have to be found. He estimated that as many as one out of every six of Virginia's public school teachers will be substandard by the end of the year.

Middies Warned Not to 'Scalp' Athletic Tickets

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Naval Academy announced today midshipmen had been ordered officially not to "scalp" or profit from the sale of tickets to Navy athletic events.

The order followed closely the confinement of Midshipman Frederick W. Lauer, jr., of Willmette, Ill., discharged for irregularities in handling tickets for the Penn-Navy game last Saturday.

Capt. Frank T. Ward, commandant of midshipmen, in an order said the athletic event tickets were "intended for the use of the individual and the family and bona fide friends.

"Midshipmen will not dispose of such tickets for financial gains or compensation . . ." he said.

Suicide Found Hanging After 6 Months to Year

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Dr. John M. Claffy reported today the body of John F. Harvey, 63, a seaman of High Point, had hung from a rafter in his garage-home from six months to a year.

Dr. Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, listed the case as suicide.

The body was discovered by Albert Qvist of New York, a friend who came to High Point to inquire about Harvey.

Schools Get $83,953

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.). St. Mary's County schools today received $83,953 as the first quarterly payment of State aid to schools. The payment was the first under the increased appropriation in the State aid program, and was $40,763 more than the payment for the same period last year.

Va. Governor Hears Tale of Buried Treasure

Richmond, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—A tale of buried treasure valued at between 10 million dollars and 11 million dollars in gold or silver bullion, and belonging to the Confederate States of America, came out of the Governor's office today.

Governor William M. Tuck said he had received a letter from F. L. Weathers of Greenville, S. C., telling of his grandfather's part as a Confederate soldier in helping place the bullion—a loan from the British government—in a "strong iron box" and burying it.

"I know the exact location in Virginia as to the place where this money is supposed to be buried," Weathers wrote. "Some time ago I talked with a resident of that area and, according to that Virginia, the place I have mentioned has remained undisturbed since the close of the Civil War.

"I hvae no reason to doubt my grandfather's story. I am the only one, to my knowledge, that he ever told. He put down the information in minute detail and I have long believed in its truthfulness."

The bullion, Weathers explained, came from England a few months "There is no known record of this having been spent," he said.

The Virginia Chief Executive, faced with budget requests for more than $500,000 in State funds, told reporters he would be glad to help anyone "who thinks he can dig up another 11 million dollars anywhere in Virginia." He will write Weathers, he said, suggesting that he come to Richmond and talk with Jesse W. Dillon, State Treasurer.

Officials had no idea as to who would own the treasure if it were located.

Frederick Planning To Eliminate Tracks

Frederick, Md., Oct. 30.—A proposal to eliminate railroad tracks on East All Saints st., and widen that thoroughfare between Market and Carroll sts. was approved by the Mayor and Aldermen last night.

City Attorney Richard E. Zimmerman was authorized to confer with officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad about having all operations conducted at the terminal on Carroll st., eliminating use of the passenger station. By widening East All Saints st. the city hopes to divert some of the present heavy downtown traffic.

Woman Held in Bond On Shooting Charge

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—A 50-year-old woman was held in $1000 bond today for a second hearing on a charge of shooting a 14-year-old school girl in the leg.

The victim, Joan Dugan, was hospitalized after she was wounded with a slug from an old-type .44-caliber revolver. The shooting occurred while the girl and a group of friends walked past the home of the defendant, Bertha Mitchell.

A further hearing will be held when the girl is released from the hospital.

German Underground Goads Russia to War on U.S.

—reports Collier's correspondent from inside Germany

THERE are at least three important elements in Germany today that are busily blueprinting a new war — a war between Russia and the United States. Authority for this news is Sigrid Schultz, whose knowledge of the Nazis is based on eyewitness reporting that dates back to 1918.

In the first of two startling articles for Collier's, Miss Schultz identified these three warmongering groups, their aims, their techniques. She shows how they rejoice in the many portents of conflict between Russia and the United States; how each in its own way is diligently fanning the flames.

Especially in Bavaria, says Miss Schultz, are reactionary elements behaving like the good old days. It was there that the Minister of Agriculture was reported to have said, "The worse things get in Bavarian agriculture, the better it will be, because the Americans will have to send us more help and they will give up trying to tell me how to run my ministry and whom to employ."

Anyone interested in the future of democracy in Europe and the world will want to read this challenging series. Start Germany's Underground Wants War in Collier's today.

Passing Fad. The score is tied. There's one minute to play. The backfield star fades back and lets go a l-o-n-g one. That's football's big thrill. But if your eyes are on the passer, you're watching the wrong man, says ace passer Paul Christman of Chicago's Cardinals. Paul tells you why it takes a lot more maneuvering to catch a forward than to throw one, why an expert receiver is worth his weight in goals. Read Football is Passing by this famous All-American.

Who's Lousing Housing? What's behind the housing debacle? Featherbedding by Labor carries a major share of the blame, says Dickson Hartwell. Cost-plus contractors who bid up black market wages; producers, suppliers and equipment manufacturers who make collusive arrangements — all have something to answer for. Take a good look at the building picture in Low-Down on the Slowdown.

Feudin' Funsters. Abbott and Costello may be a belly laugh to the rest of the nation, but they're just a pain in the neck to each other. Here's the rollicking story of this zany pair who've built a huge success upon a foundation of mutual antagonism and professional jealousy. Read Gold-Plated Corn by Stanley Frank.

She Married a Mystery. Can a woman be married 25 years and still not know her husband? That's the riddle posed by this moving story of a man whose true character was known only to his friends; his wife found out when it was too late. Read The Home-Coming of Henry by Gertrude Schweitzer.

Retail Sales Here Up 10% During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Boosted by cashing of GI terminal leave bonds, September retail sales in Washington soared 10 per cent over the same month last year and are believed to have set a new record for that month.

In the Fifth Federal Reserve District, sales of 86 department stores increased 6 per cent last month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

Nationally, according to the Commerce Department, retail sales reached $9,285,000,000, about 13 per cent above the same month last year. The department's index of retail sales showed the September volume as 188 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

In Washington, the retail sales index for September was 184 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

Dollars channeled storewise by terminal leave bond cashing and a break in the prolonged heat wave which retarded August buying were cited as major influences in the sharp September sales rise.

More than one billion dollars in cash has been paid out by the Government since September 2 to veterans who held $1,865,000,000 in bonds when the cashing began.

Clothing stores registered the biggest gain during September, exceeding the normal seasonal rise by 13 per cent. Sales at general merchandise stores, eating and drinking places and food stores gained 2 to 5 per cent in September.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: C. Clinton James was reelected general counsel of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League this week. There's "no news" in that because the same thing has been happening for so many years that no one, including James, seems to know exactly how many. He guesses "more than 30 years."

James

The record shows that James was general counsel of the league when he was elected its president in 1915. One of the best known figures in local finance, James was born in Washington. He attended local schools and graduated from Georgetown Law School. He was one of the organizers of Columbia Permanent in 1903 and today is vice president of its successor, Jefferson Federal Savings & Loan Association. He served as president of the United States Building and Loan League in 1926 and currently is vice chairman of the national group's Federal legislative committee.

PHONE OUTLAYS: Directors of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday approved an additional $749,000 outlay for improvements. Of the amount, $671,800 will be spent to install equipment permitting operator dialing on long distance calls. Total outlays authorized here so far this year amount to $15,909,000.

ODD LOTS: Appalachian Electric Power Co. of Virginia has registered with SEC a 28-million-dollar issue of 30-year first mortgage bonds and 75,000 shares of $100 par cumulative preferred stock. The bonds will be sold competitively . . . Automotive News estimates that October will supplant September as the highest production month of postwar era, with total estimated output this week of 101,554 vehicles . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index declined in week ended October 28 to $6.78 from $6.90 in previous week . . . Henry Hazlitt, magazine columnist and economist, has written a book, "Will Dollars Save the World?" published by D. Appleton-Century Co., Inc. . . . Articles by Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder are included in 1947 international edition of Cotton Trade Jgurnal . . . Carpet prices probably will rise another 3 to 5 per cent before spring because of increased costs, Bigelow-Sanford president predicts.

NEW PRESIDENT: Lawrence T. Hopkinson, former War Food Administration official, has been elected president of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries Co. He succeeds Edward H. Cooley. At the same time Roger W. Babson, noted economist, succeeded F. Meredith Blagden as chairman of the board.

Md. Administration Readying Tax Program for Legislature

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Maryland sales tax, and whether to move the exemption from 9 to 14 cents, along with special taxes for Baltimore City and what to do about them, today occupied the attention of Maryland's State administration, as it worked out a final draft of its program for a special session of the Legislature.

Gov. William Preston Lane, Jr., started conferences with Attorney General Hall Hammond, State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles and other advisers to reach a decision on the bills to be presented to the General Assembly when it meets next Wednesday.

The purpose of the special November 5 session is to work out a taxation program which will allow Baltimore City to balance its 82-million-dollar budget. But even more serious attention was given to making changes in the State's 2-per-cent sales tax law.

Other Measures Up

Up for discussion as part of the administration's program, in addition to the sales tax and Baltimore City bill, are measures to amend the State roads program, to provide more funds for State hospitals and other institutions whose operating funds have been depleted by high living costs, and to initiate a two-million-dollar bond issue for a legislative office building.

Lane and the experts will meet again tomorrow. They were not expected to announce their decisions until the legislative council meets Monday to receive the bills, and pass them along to be printed.

The impression persisted that the administration would recommend an increase in the sales tax exemption from 9 cents to 14 cents.

County Wants Funds

Meanwhile, officials in Baltimore County let it be known that they would seek special taxing powers at the session, along with the city.

The administration bill, to replace a special tax act which expires in Baltimore City in December, has not been disclosed in detail but generally it is intended to allow the city to go into revenue fields which are not in conflict with the taxing powers of the State.

Christian H. Kahl, president of the Baltimore County Board of Commissioners, said a bill was being drafted to allow levies on various luxury items, including cigarettes, other tobacco products, and distilled spirits.

Montgomery and possibly other larger counties also are expected to ask for similar taxing authority, but their bills seemed certain to meet opposition.

Union Man Cleared in Denton

Denton, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Lawrence Christopher of Federalsburg, a representative of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL), was found innocent today of disorderly conduct charges arising out of a strike at a Ridgely button plant.

Christopher was arrested October 7, along with Irvin Jaffe, Baltimore representative of the union after approximately half the employes of the Ridgely and Federalsburg plants of the Excelsior Pearl Works quit their jobs in a demand for union recognition.

Judge J. Owen Knotts and Associate Judge William R. Horney said witnesses had differed as to the content of an allegedly "inflammatory" speech made by Christopher, and that in all other respects the defendant had conducted himself "in a proper and orderly manner."

Jaffee was fined $25 and costs on a similar disorderly conduct charge October 25. He said employes at the two plants struck because the company refused to recognize the ILGWU as their bargaining agent.

James Lynch, president of the Ridgely Chamber of Commerce and chief of special deputies appointed to preserve order during the strike, quoted Christopher as telling the strikers:

"We have 22 million dollars and 400,000 members to support you. We wan to unionize this plant. Do whatever you want.

"We will pay your doctor's bills, your hospital bills, lawyers' fees and court costs."

Both plants of the button works have continued to operate since the strike started.

Morgan Seeks Critic of Work For County

Montgomery County Civil Service Commissioner Jo V. Morgan has taken legal steps to learn who wrote a county government press release accusing him of "dilatory" service.

Morgan, through his attorney, James R. Miller, was granted subpoenas summoning County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr and his secretary Mrs. Eleanor Lanigan to a hearing to give depositions.

Morgan, a Democrat, has frequently been at odds with the county's Republican administration. He is one of the few holdovers from the preceding Democratic administration.

Commenting on action taken by the County Commissioners on September 30 reducing Morgan's salary for the part-time job from $4800 annually to $1200 per year, the statement said the reduction was made as a result of "continued difficulties on the part of the county authorities to obtain satisfactory results from the Civil Service Commissioner's office.

"To the best of our knowledge, Mr. Morgan has not appeared at the Civil Service Commissioner's office in the Court House more than one hour per week for the last three months," it said.

Both Morgan and Attorney Miller declined yesterday to say whether or not they would take further court action against the statement's author when identified.

The hearing will be held before John Huless, a Silver Spring notary public, and a court stenographer on Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. in the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department Building.

He Can't Cite Garbo

Old Film Talks Back to Thomas

By Richard L. Coe

IN PRESENTING the 8-year-old "Ninotchka" on the Columbia screen, Metro is directly answering Chairman Thomas' question about the lack of anti-Communist films from Hollywood.

"Ninotchka" couldn't be more anti-Communist than it is; it lays on the committee's much-feared "movie propaganda" with a trowel. It was made at a time when we were cool toward the Soviet, and its appearance now while we are at least on diplomatic speaking terms, certainly is questionable if you're of the anti-propaganda-in-the-movies school.

As a movie, it's very good indeed, a far wittier comedy than most of the present-day excitement. It has its arid patches, but its humor is solid and both the story-telling and the direction are first-rate.

But "Ninotchka's" real value is that it presents once again the great Garbo. The enchanting Swede is as compelling as her glamorous legend. Her face always is intriguing to watch and it's not beyond the realms of possibility that her enigmatic expression will beguile researchers of the future as completely as has Mona Lisa's mysterious smile.

What an irony it is—that one of the screen's unique personalities should be brought back because of the slurs that have been so mercilessly thrown at an art which hasn't recently found her a "profitable" figure.

As the solemn lawyer sent by Moscow to settle an international dispute over former imperial jewels, Garbo is superbly resourceful. Her "Camille" has gradually become one of the classics of the screen; here she is playing a high comedy role with a finesse that is equalled on the stage today by only Lynn Fontanne and Ina Claire.

And—Ina herself is in the picture. She's the Grand Duchess Swana, and a more polished etching of a lady you'll seek far to find. She's slimmer in this 8-year-old film than she was in last season's "The Fatal Weakness," but her performance—and particularly her scenes with Garbo—is a model of polished screen acting.

As the "prapaganda" which the committee chairman complains about in one breath and wonders why there isn't more of it in the next, "Ninotchka" is the wise sort which does it with humor. It's sharply written by Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder and Walter Riesch, the same Brackett and Wilder who gave us "The Lost Weekend," which has been viewed in some quarters as a propaganda picture favoring prohibition!

Over "Ninotchka" is spread the well-known "Lubitsch touch," which means that the direction is smooth, polished and witty.

"HENRY V," which finished a three-day run at the Apex yesterday, moves over to the Hiser, Bethesda, today for a two-day stay. Performances are twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:30.

CAPITAL CULTURE: The Philadelphia, Boston or New York symphonies wouldn't dare try it, but tonight's two performances of Grand Ole Opry, at Constitution Hall up from Nashville, are scaled up to six bucks a seat. And both performances, at 7 and 9:15, are virtually sold out; there still may be a few seats left. But there's something wildly amusing in this band of twang artists zooming into a concert hall whose nominal attractions wouldn't dream of charging a scale from $1.20 to $6.

HALLOWEEN PARTIES are planned at 11 of the Warner neighborhood houses, with cash prizes for costumes. For children under 7, three prizes will go for the prettiest costumes; for youngsters between 7 and 14, there'll be three prizes each for the prettiest costumes and three prizes each for the funniest costumes. The parties will be at 10:30 a. m. at the Sheridan, Silver, Takoma, Tivoli, Uptown, Calvert, Penn, Beverly and Kennedy theaters; at 1:30 p. m. at the Seco, and at 3:30 p. m. at the MacArthur.

SATURDAY also brings in two new films—"Her Husband's Affairs" at the Warner and "A Lady Surrenders" at the Hippodrome. Lucille Ball, Franchot Tone and Edward Everett Horton are the stars of the Warner comedy. "A Lady Surrenders" is a British drama, with Margaret Lockwood playing a pianist who has only a few months to live. Stewart Granger, Patricia Roc and Tom Walls head the supporting cast.

BRIEFLY: There'll be a midnight show tonight at the Capitol in honor of Halloween . . . Claude Thornhill's band is playing for the GWU homecoming dance at the National Guard Armory Saturday night; further information from the Lisner Auditorium box office . . . Current newsreels have more of the Un-American Activities Committee hearings . . . To the Lust and Warner Halloween parties add more for the youngsters Saturday at the K-B theaters, the Apex, Naylor, Senator and Atlas.

TOMORROW: Theater folk in person and via the mail bag chat with Reporter Richard L. Coe.

"NINOTCHKA." M-G-M release (1939) produced and directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Screen play by Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder and Walter Reisch. Original by Melchior Lengyel. At the Columbia.

'Other Love' Has Zip of Its X-Ray Slides

By Leo Brady

In "The Other Love," at the Capitol, Barbara Stanwyck has her choice of accepting an invalid's lot and prolonging her life, or rebelling against the doctor's orders and having a wild, final fling before dying gracefully against the background of Miklos Rosza's music.

As it turns out, she does both and neither, for the script writers turn up at the end, like Marines, with a hitherto unhinted-at (but hardly unexpected) third choice. Barbara butters her bread, eats it and then gets cake after all.

This is the kind of picture women are supposed to like—a libel to which I cannot subscribe.

On the Capitol stage, at least three of the acts are pleasant to watch—Steve Evans, who makes the audience laugh by laughing variously himself; the Bunin puppets, whose operators are both clever and funny; and Johnson and Owen, who do incredible and athletic tricks on a bar. The Arthur Murray dancers are on hand (on foot?) to demonstrate ballroom dancing. They offer to criticize your own brand of bumbling in the lobby. Wonder what studio they recommend if they find flaws in your footwork?

Swing Sessions

Frankie Takes Hour to Cut a Side

By Bill Gottlieb

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Frank Sinatra looked worse than usual during last Wednesday's recording date. The only excess flesh on his skinny frame was under his eyes, in bags.

When Frankie laughed, you fancied you could hear 60,000 massed females squealing and swooning. But the rest of the time, you'd swear he'd been exhumed to make four last sides for Columbia Records, Inc.

It had been a tough month for Frankie. In addition to his usual chores, he'd been making one recording date after another to build a backlog of standards before the Petrillo recording ban went into effect.

When in New York, Sinatra always records at night. The sessions, run off in the Liedekrantz Hall studios, are held at odd times to avoid unwanted characters. As it was, The Voice carried to the studio a considerable entourage . . . managers, assistants, arrangers, even his publicity man, George Evans. There were enough staff kibitzers without wanting any freelancers.

Works Best Late

Frankie also likes to work late because that's when he works best. And what Sinatra likes, he gets. Like no other person at any other recording sessions I've ever attended, Frank Sinatra is boss. There were recording directors, chief engineers and music supervisor, Axel Stordahl. But it was Frankie who decided when the fiddles were too loud, when the timing was off or when he, himself, didn't breathe properly. Only time he lost out was when Engineer Fred Plaut discreetly out-argued him about the number of grooves that could be crammed on a 10-inch record.

But Frankie, who once got bad publicity for correcting a symphony conductor, doesn't push people around. He has an easy manner and his judgment is respected. Even Recording Director Dick Jones, who was nominal head of the session, didn't feel superfluous or resentful.

Frank is a good guy. He was even in my corner. During a practice "cut," I happened to be photographing the band's beautiful blond harpist when a defective flash bulb exploded with a bang. The men in the control room began to explode, too. "Relax," said Frankie, "this isn't a final cut."

Very Fussy

This Sinatra guy is very fussy. He takes an hour to cut a single side. Took almost an hour and a half to do "Laura." "That's one of the three hardest tunes I've ever sung," he told me. "You can't open your throat on it. Got to keep your voice real tight." He placed two fingers close to each other to illustrate.

After doing "Laura," Frank decided he wasn't satisfied with "Night and Day." He had made it earlier but it ran too long. At 12:30 a. m., he decided to recut. Nobody exactly objected; but someone did casually mention that if they finished before 1 a. m., they'd save $600 in overtime. Frankie got the point. After a few frantic, unsuccessful attempts to get the time nearer three minutes, he decided to stick to the earlier cut and put it on a 12-inch platter.

RECORD BRIEFS: Quicker than you can say Eric Wolfgang Korngold, his song "Love for Love" will be a hit tune, if for no other reason than the number of recordings made of it. Best, to date, are by Hal McIntyre (MGM), Andy Russell (Capitol), Claude Thornhill (Columbia) and Vaughan Monroe (RCA-Victor) . . . You can hear Stan Kenton's new Latin guitarist and bongo drummer, as well as June Christy, on slightly calypsonian "Curiosity." Plattermate, a serious piano specialty called "Theme to the West," is pompous. . . . Most thrilling piece of hot music this month comes from a West Coast tenor saxist, Lucky Thompson, on "Boppin' the Blues" and "Just One More Chance" (RCA-Victor). Latter side should become a classic.

Annual Armistice Day Proclamation Issued

President Truman yesterday issued his annual proclamation calling for the observance of November 11 as Armistice Day.

The President called upon the people to devote themselves anew "to the grateful use of the peace we now enjoy in our beloved country after a second world holocaust" and to the promotion of a permanent peace among all nations.

British Must Win Own Fight, Princess Elizabeth Declares

Glasgow, Oct. 30 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth, standing in a bleak drizzle, today urged a throng of 150,000 to keep British unity alive "at all costs" as she christened the Cunard liner Caronia at its launching.

With her future husband, Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, by her side, the heir presumptive to Britain's throne used phrases reminiscent of Winston Churchill's wartime speeches as she exhorted her countrymen to win their economic battle for themselves.

"We have friends in many other parts of the world," the princess declared, "and we know that we can count on whatever help they can give. But it cannot be said too often that a country, like an individual, must work out its own salvation at home."

The princess reminded her hearers of the Battle of Britain in 1940, when "we stood alone, and we had to fight for survival in the skies."

"Today our battlefield is in the factories, the fields, the mines and the shipyards," she said. "But as in 1940, we have got to win this battle ourselves."

The 30,000-ton Caronia, costing more than 12 million dollars and accommodating 1000 passengers, will join the Mauretania, Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary in the transatlantic service.

The phrase, "hermetically sealed," comes from the use of the "seal of Hermes," the pagan god, which alchemists placed on their vessels.

Fort Ringgold, the old cavalry post where Civil War Gens. Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant soldiered together as young officers, is now owned by a school district.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Laborite Expelled by Commons For Selling Party Secrets

London, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Commons tonight expelled Labor Member Garry Allighan for writing that its members got drunk during sessions and for accepting pay from a newspaper for revealing secrets of meetings of the Parliamentary Labor Party.

Winston Church, Conservative leader, forced the expulsion after the government had proposed merely to suspend Allighan for six months and have the speaker reprimand him severely.

"How can the House stigmatize a member as dishonorable, and then after an interval resume calling him an honorable member?" Churchill asked.

The government left the decision to a free vote — releasing members from their obligation to follow party lines and Allighan was expelled by a vote of 187 to 75 for "gross contempt of the House."

The House then found Arthur Heighway, publisher of the World's Press News, guilty of gross contempt for publishing Allighan's drunkenness charge and he was called before the bar and reprimanded by the speaker.

Next Commons took up the case of Labor Member Evelyn Walkden, who had admitted he received $20 a week from the Evening News for articles similar to those of Allighan reporting details of secret labor caucuses. He too was found guilty of gross contempt and was reprimanded.

Allighan was elected for the Gravesend district near London in the labor landslide of 1945. He is 47.

After the First World War he became a newspaperman and became industrial editor of the Daily Mail before his election to Commons.

Cripps Expects No Marshall Aid for Britain

By Don Cook

London, Oct. 30.—Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister for Economic Affairs, told foreign correspondents today that the British people "are once again decisively on the move and they are moving forward to victory over their present difficulties."

He said that the Labor government has discounted any likelihood of any assistance under the Marshall Plan in its calculations for getting Britain out of her economic difficulties. The 300 million dollars remainder of the American loan, now frozen, has, however, been included on the credit side of the projected balance-of-trade ledger for 1948.

Sir Stafford said the British nation "is working harder and to better effect than ever before in peacetime—though for reasons entirely beyond its own control and almost entirely as a result of the war, it is getting less for its great efforts than for a long time past."

Some sections of world opinion underrate both the difficulties and the determination to overcome them, he said.

For Americans, he said that the government was doing everything possible to encourage British exporters to ship to the Western States of the United States and more especially bring prices down to reach the mass American market—not just the luxury market. The future depended a lot on how willing Americans might be to buy British goods, Sir Stafford added.

Harridge Calls American Loop Showdown Meeting Today in Chandler-O'Connor Feud

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THERE'S MORE THAN meets the eye in the newest baseball squabble that involves Leslie O'Connor, general manager of the White Sox, with Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler. It's a head-on clash of personalities that baseball people knew was long overdue.

POVICH

So far, Chandler has cracked down on O'Connor, fining the White Sox $500 and virtually suspending them from the league until he pays the fine, which he says he won't pay. Chandler says O'Connor violated a rule by signing a high school player before he graduated, and O'Connor says he didn't. Chandler has announced that the White Sox have forfeited all future rights to George Zoeterman, promising young pitcher.

Many another club owner in the American League today is taking a fiendish satisfaction from the fact that it's O'Connor who is in dutch with the commissioner's office. They remembered him as the late Judge Landis' right hand man, who dealt mercilessly with any club owner caught in violation of the rules.

WHEN IT WAS suggested at one point following the death of Landis that O'Connor be appointed the new commissioner, there was no support for him. One club owner, panicked at the whole idea that O'Connor might succeed Landis, commented "No, not that man. He's suspicious of everybody. He's the kind of a man who thinks everybody's guilty until they're proved innocent."

One of Chandler's first acts after he was named commissioner, and before he actually took office, was to rid the commissioner's office of O'Connor. He brought in his own man, Walter Mulbry, his secretary on Capitol Hill, to take over O'Connor's job. O'Connor found employment as general manager of the White Sox after Chandler cut him adrift.

O'Connor, when Landis died, declared there never could be another commissioner in the same sense. He was worshipful of the venerable Landis, and he has never looked with high favor on Chandler. At every suggestion that Landis made mistakes, O'Connor has defended him with religious fervor. He has never openly supported Chandler.

IN EFFECT, Chandler threw the book at O'Connor. Interpreting O'Connor's refusal to pay the fine as complete defiance, which apparently it was, the commissioner ruled that the White Sox were denied the "privileges of the rules." That means they are no longer a part of the American League, can schedule no games with league teams and are out in the cold until they pay up.

That's why League President Will Harridge called a special meeting of the club owners in Cleveland today. At this time, the American League is disrupted, and it becomes an important matter for the other club owners. It could be an explosive meeting at Cleveland and if O'Connor wins support in his contention that he violated no rule, then Chandler may get the greatest rebuff of his career as commissioner.

Indications are, however, that the rest of the American League will support Chandler in this case. If the White Sox ownership continues to support O'Connor in his adamant stand, a transfer of the franchise is even possible. But there is doubt that Mrs. Grace Comiskey, who inherited the White Sox team, would go that far.

WHAT O'CONNOR is claiming is that Chandler didn't have the authority to make a ruling denying the White Sox rights to the young pitcher. When the rule against signing high school boys was originally adopted last December, it applied only to schools in the National Federation of High Schools, not to parochial schools. Young Zoeterman attended a private high school.

But twice since last December, Chandler has issued bulletins advising the owners that the rule applied to all high schools, public and private. He issued that decree first in February, later in May. No protest by any club was recorded at the time, and Chandler says they were fully informed.

Now O'Connor is saying Chandler didn't have the authority to enlarge the rule merely by bulletin. Perhaps he didn't, but that won't help O'Connor. Judge Landis used to interpret the rules to his liking without even notifying the club owners, and Landis could do no wrong, in the O'Connor view.

Armed Set to Cop Special at Pimlico

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 30.—Calumet Farm's Armed—Fort Knox on four legs—is expected to ring the turf's cash register to the tune of $25,000 in tomorrow's eleventh running of the Pimlico Special.

The son of Bull Lea and Armful is one of the two guns Warren Wright will shoot—the other is Fervent—in racing's sportsmanship event.

Only two others, like Fervent, 3-year-olds, will try to turn back the Calumets. They are William G. Helis' Cosmic Bomb and Walter M. Jeffords' Loyal Legion.

Loyal Legion on Rail

Post Positions were drawn as entries closed this morning and the No. 1, rail slot, went to Loyal Legion. Armed will be No. 2. Cosmic Bomb drew the No. 3 post and Fervent will be outside.

Armed is generally regarded as tops in the handicap division and a strong candidate for "horse of the year" honors while Fervent rates well up the list among the better 3-year-olds.

As a matter of fact, the clash among Fervent, Cosmic Bomb and Loyal Legion, promises to be one of the more interesting angles of this year's Special since the one making the best showing may get the vote as the leader in his division.

Armed, under the weight-for-age condition of the 1 3-16 miles Special will be called upon to carry 126 pounds and the three rivals will be packing 120.

Armed Out to Repeat

For Calumet Farm, it will be an attempt to register a fourth victory in Pimlico's sporting winner-take-all affair, the stable of Warren Wright having accounted for the 1942 race when Whirlaway won in a walk-over, the 1944 edition with Twilight Tear and the 1945 running with Armed.

Armed, naturally, will be shooting for his second Special triumph and thus equal the mark set by Challedon in 1939 and 1940 to become the only two-time winner of this stake.

Riders have been assigned for some time and there was no change in the original schedule. Doug Dodson will be on Armed, Albert Snider on Fervent, Ovie Schurlock on Cosmic Bomb and Eddie Arcaro on Loyal Legion.

All four candidates were on the track this morning under the watchful eyes of their trainers. Armed was sent five furlongs in 1:01 2/5 while Fervent's drill was a six furlong spin in 1:15 1/5.

Booth Respects Armed

Cosmic Bomb went a half in 49 after three furlongs in 37 and Loyal Legion, fresh from two stakes scores at Laurel, was asked only for a half in 48 4/5.

Trainer H. A. (Jimmy) Jones of Calumet Farm had little to say about the Special except that "we'll be whipping with both hands" meaning that he believed his entry would give a good account of itself.

Cosmic Bomb's trainer, William Booth, reported his colt fit but wasn't too sure any 3-year-old could handle Armed.

Oscar White, the silent fellow who Loyal Legion, had no comment to make.

Post time for the first race will be 1:15 p. m. as scheduled through out the meeting here.

Speaking Frankly

Terp Win Would Stun Jim Tatum

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If once-beaten Maryland defeats once-beaten West Virginia tomorrow, the most surprised man in the jam-packed gathering of more than 15,000 will be Jim Tatum, head coach of the Terps.

Unlike many of his brothers in the coaching fraternity who have one-way tickets to the crying room, Tatum is a very frank young man who doesn't force false tears or artificial smiles.

"I'd like nothing better than to win this homecoming game," he said rather calmly yesterday, "but I don't think we've got too much of a chance."

"We're Outclassed"

"We're just outclassed. We'll give them a good ball game. I'm quite sure of that, but I must be perfectly frank and say that a victory for us would astound me. They're just too good and too deep for us.

"Look at the ball game they played Penn State. They got beat 21-14 and I'm convinced, from our scouting reports, that if West Virginia had played at least one tough ball game before meeting Penn State they probably would have won.

But they had an easy time over such teams as Otterbein, Waynesburg, NYU, and Washington and Lee and weren't toughened up enough to play a tough team like Penn State."

Looking beyond Saturday's tussle, Tatum said he was also convinced that the Terps have already experienced most of the success the team would enjoy this year.

"Looks Pretty Dark"

"We'll probably win one more game this year—against Duquesne. Outside of that it looks pretty dark. We've got North Carolina, N. C. State, and Vanderbilt coming up after Duquesne. Nothing easy about that, is there?

There wasn't a gloomy note in Tatum's frank discourse and there wasn't a trace of gloom in yesterday's practice.

The boys zipped through their drill with plenty of spirit and left the impression that reputation alone wouldn't clinch a win for West Virginia—the Mountaineers would have to show something Saturday.

ONE LESS GOBBLER—Miss Gloria Rea, 2915 Connecticut ave. nw., sees to it that there will be one less gobbler rooting for the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Gobblers at Griffith Stadium tonight when George Washington plays its homecoming game against VPI

'Happy' Asks Removal of Sox Official From Council

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—President Will Harridge of the American League today projected his organization into the controversy raging between A. B. Chandler, commissioner of baseball, the Chicago White Sox and Leslie O'Connor, suspended general manager of the Sox.

Harridge called a special meeting of league club owners, or their representatives, to be held in the Hotel Cleveland at Cleveland tomorrow to "consider" the action taken against the White Sox and O'Connor.

Harridge revealed that Chandler had requested the removal of O'Connor from a baseball's executive council. Presumably, Harridge said, Chandler wanted O'Connor removed because he would ineligible to serve because of his suspension.

The council is composed of Chandler, Warren Giles, General Manager of the Cincinnati Club, and the presidents of the American and National Leagues, Harridge and Ford Frick.

O'Connor Will Explain

"The commissioner's request for O'Connor's removal will be taken up at our Cleveland meeting tomorrow," President Harridge said. "Every American League club will be represented to consider the suspension of the White Sox organization and its general manager."

O'Connor will attend to explain his side of the controversy and to exhibit correspondence that passed between himself and Chandler over the signing of an obscure 17-year-old Chicago high school boy pitcher.

The signing resulted in a $500 fine and later suspension of O'Connor and the White Sox because of O'Connor's refusal to remit on the plea that he had not violated any rule.

The school boy athlete involved is George Zeoterman, promising lefthanded pitcher, signed to a 1948 contract after he had served as a batting practice pitcher with

Nats Back Happy

Vice President Calvin Griffith, representing the Washington Baseball Club, will vote in complete support of Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler at the special American League meeting called for today at Cleveland.

The Washington club's stand on the squabble between Chandler and General Manager Leslie O'Connor of the Chicago White Sox, was made plain by President Clark Griffith yesterday.

He said: "Chandler's action in fining and suspending the White Sox for signing a high school player before he had graduated is perfectly in order. Every club knew the rules, and the White Sox defied them. We will vote to sustain the commissioner, if a vote is taken."

Tech, Central Risk Grasp On Loop Lead

The interhigh football race, which has narrowed to a two-team affair between McKinley Tech's Trainers and Central's Vikings, goes into its fifth week today with three league games slated.

Tech and Central, tied for first place with 4-0 records, both see action today. The Trainers play the third place Anacostia Indians at Anacostia, and the Vikings entertain Woodrow Wilson's Green Tigers, who are tied for last with Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

The Riders, who, like Wilson, have lost all four of their league games, tackle Eastern's Ramblers, who are tied for fourth with idle Coolidge, at Eastern. All three interhigh games begin at 3:30 p. m.

Ten other contests are on today's slate, including the 3:30 tilt at Garrett Park that pits undefeated and untied St. John's against the strong Georgetown Prep eleven that has won three straight after losing its first two.

The Trainers, still unscored on in interhigh competition, face their toughest opposition so far in the improved Anacostia team that after losing 12-0 to Central, has racked up Gonzaga, Roosevelt, Wilson and tied Western.

Central is heavy favorite over Wilson. But a repetition by the Vikings of their poor showing while beating Roosevelt, 7-0, last week could spell upset for them. The Green Tigers, like the Indians, have been improving. Their line is a little weak, but they have a trio of explosive backs in Pat O'Neill, Dan Ventries and Mole Janigan.

Battered G. W. Faces V. P. I. Here

This is Homecoming Weekend for the George Washington University football team, and by way of celebrating, the Colonials take on Virginia Polytechnic Institute's Gobblers tonight at 8:00 on the Griffith Stadium gridiron.

More than 10,000 fans are expected to turn out for the game that should see the end of a losing streak for one of the two teams.

The Colonials, without a victory this season, lost successively to Virginia, V. M. I., Washington and Lee, Wake Forest and Miami. The Gobblers, after winning their opener to Furman, were beaten by Virginia, William and Mary, Army and Maryland.

George Washington, bothered by injuries all season, still retains much of its backfield strength, and will lead, as in the past, with Fullback Bill Spangler, its only triple-threater; Frank Cavallo, its best passer, and Al DuGoff, who excels in the open field.

Tackle Carl Butkus, 240 pounds, is the Colonials' best lineman. He is the only lineman starting today's game who has started in all of G. W.'s previous games.

V. P. I. Coach Jimmy Kitts, under fire recently because of his team's losing streak, is starting what amounts to his second team. His backfield stars, who are expected to enter the game soon after the kikoff are Sterling Wingo, 165 pound scatback, Ray Beasley, jr., 180 pound passer, and Bob Smith, 175 pound punter.

Bowles Top Passer

The leading Gobbler pass combination is Quarterback Floyd Bowles, who tosses 'em from the T-formation, and 6 foot, 3 inch Oren Hopkins, an end from Norfolk.

G. W. students and alumni have planned a festive Homecoming celebration around tonight game. It began last night with a bon-fire and pep rally on the Lisner Auditorium terrace, and continues tonight at 7:30 with a parade of floats and banner-bedecked cars from Twentieth and G sts. nw. to Griffith Stadium.

At halftime, 16 candidates for the title of "G. W. Homecoming Queen" will parade on the field, with the 110-piece V. P. I. and G. W. bands providing music. The queen will be crowned tomorrow night at a dance at the National Guard Armory.

Guests of G. W. will be the West Virginia University and the St. John's McKinley Tech, Eastern and Central High football teams.

Hoyas Regain Baranowski For B. C. Clash

At full strength in the quarterback department for the first time in a long while, Georgetown University's 34-man grid squad entrained last night for its clash with an ancient and bitter rival—Boston College—tomorrow afternoon.

As Babe Barabowski was declared in shape to play, the Hoyas boasted all the field generals they think they need to stop a BC eleven they haven't beaten since 1930. Elmer Raba and Johnny Hughes, neither of whom played in last year's renewal of the Boston series, filled out the quarterback list.

Tackle George Antone and End George Benigni were doubtful performers, though both made the trip. Jim O'Keefe, 260-pound tackle, was left at home with an infection resulting from an injury suffered in last week's NYU game.

Georgetown still ranks a 20-point underdog against the Eagles, but no one was unhappy over the fact, least of all Coach Jack Hagerty. With the same rating in 1946, the Hoyas came within four minutes of winning, that time being used by the Eagles to score two touchdowns in the last quarter of a seven point victory.

Now BC boasts three victories and one defeat—by LSU—and its latest triumph was by 6-0 over Villanova. That single touchdown margin was credited to newcomer Joe Biminick, fleet halfback who raced 56 yards to score.

USGA Shifts National Open

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The 1949 National Open golf championship will be played at Chicago's Medinah Country Club, the United States Golf Association announced today in completing its tournament schedule for next year and listing the sites for major events in 1949.

The USGA had previously announced that the 1948 National Open would be played at the Riviera Country Club, Los Angeles, June 10-12, and the National public links tournament at the North Fulton Park course, Atlanta, Ga., July 19-24.

Compromise Unlikely

The United Press reported last night that the Cleveland meeting "may determine" whether Chandler or O'Connor "remains in baseball."

There appeared no chance of a compromise, the United Press said, pointing out that "O'Connor's stand represented the first absolute challenge of Chandler's authority since the former Kentucky Senator took over as baseball czar in 1945."

Some baseball sources speculated that the meeting "would result in a vote of confidence, about 6 to 2, for O'Connor," the United Press said, and that Harridge himself may support O'Connor.

Middies Get Big Sendoff

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Navy's football squad started the long journey to Cleveland tonight for an appointment that few teams these days consider an unqualified pleasure.

The Middies, who have won only one and tied one in five attempts, take on vaunted Notre Dame before an anticipated 81,000 paying guests in the giant Municipal Stadium Saturday.

A glance at the books portends little joy for Coach Tom Hamilton's grid ensemble, but there were no signs of alarm around Bancroft Hall when the brigade staged a thunderous pep rally last night.

All but the Midshipmen directly involved in the proceedings will remain by the Severn, so they gave the squad a rousing send-off in Tecumseh Court.

Despite an unimpressive record this fall, football fever has caught on at Annapolis and today the Middies in white work uniforms chanted Navy cheers as they marched between classes.

Hamilton had little to say other than to verify that his starting lineup will be the same as last week and to reiterate Navy's satisfaction with the keen yet amicable rivalry between the two schools.

All the Runs Won't Be on The Gridiron

Catholic University's cross-country team will share the spotlight with the gridmen Saturday at Brookland, meeting Bridgewater College in a dual meet while the Card football squad is battling Naval Apprentice School of Norfolk.

The foot race, matching the Mason-Dixon Conference champs (Bridgewater) against Coach Dorsey Griffith's consistent squad, will finish in the stadium at intermission.

As an added attraction this week the Cardinals also will parade their new 40-piece band for the first time. The musicians are under the direction of Raymond A. Hart.

In football, meanwhile, Coach Gene Augusterfer has been forced to shuffle his line-up because of injuries. Johnny Kvedar will replace Bill Daley at center and Bob Mulvey, an end, will again hold down the tackle post formerly occupied by Al Fulner.

Deer Hunters Are Warned Of Weak Hearts

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Deer hunters were cautioned today that heart disease is almost as great a menace to their lives as stray bullets.

Almost 40 per cent of the deer-hunting deaths in the United States are caused by heart attacks, Clay Schoenfeld of Madison, Wis., said in an article in Hygeia, health magazine of the American Medical Association.

"The average man in the woods operates unconsciously at a pace and under a strain which he wouldn't think of putting up with back home.

"The fellow who wouldn't walk a block to catch a bus suddenly goes tramping through underbrush on a 10-mile deer drive. The man who never carries out his furnace ashes decides to drag a 200-pound buck a half mile back to the road," he said.

St. John's Wins, 18-6

The St. John's jayvee eleven trounced the Devitt jayvee, 18-6, at St. John's yesterday for the victor's fifth straight triumph.

West Virginia Makes One Change for Terps

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—A 34-man West Virginia University football squad left tonight for Washington and an engagement with the University of Maryland.

Mountaineer Head Coach Bill Kern said he would stick to his usual starting lineup, except that Clarence Cox would replace Fred Morecraft at left end. Tom Keane and Russ Combs, alternating quarterbacks, will serve as co-captains.

Upon arrival in Washington tomorrow morning, the West Virginia squad will go to its quarters in the Wardman Park Hotel and from there to College Park for a final rehearsal at Byrd Stadium in the afternoon.

Skins Sign Jim Castiglia

A familiar figure to Washington fans will be wearing No. 26 for the Redskins Sunday as they play the Philadelphia Eagles at Griffith Stadium.

He's Jim Castiglia, former Georgetown great who became a Redskin yesterday as other National Football League clubs failed to claim him on waivers. He was released by the last-place Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference.

This Corner Likes Texas, Michigan, Georgia Tech

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Your football forecaster joins the rest of the Halloween pranksters with a pigskin prophecy which, in the light of recent spooky happenings that dropped our average to .788 on 301 correct predictions and 81 misses, is guaranteed to frighten anybody:

Texas vs. Southern Methodist—This game has everything. Both teams are all-victorious and boast fine individual performers, Bobby Layne of Texas and Doak Walker of SMU. Each blanked Rice, their only common opponent to date, by two touchdowns. This corner strings along with the Longhorns 'til the cows come home.

Michigan vs. Illinois—Here is the tussle both teams were looking toward last week when Michigan barely squeaked past Minnesota and Illinois stubbed its toe against Purdue. If the Wolverines get over this hump, they can start lining up for tickets to Pasadena. A hefty vote for Michigan.

Duke vs. Georgia Tech—Nobody knows just how good Georgia Tech really is, but we may find out Saturday. The all-victorious Yellow Jackets have whipped five foes by 20 points or mode while once-tied Duke had to come from behind last week to trip Wake Forest. One big vote for Georgia Tech.

Navy vs Notre Dame—Any defeat for the Irish between now and their December date with Southern Cal would call for a recount. Navy is improving, but not fast enough to handle the South Beneders unless they forget all their signals, which isn't likely. The usually vote for Notre Dame.

California vs. UCLA—Strictly a toss-up, which is something the Ucians probably are familiar with since several of them fell victims to food poisoning. A California victory would give Southern Cal a clear field to the Rose Bowl. However, one shaky vote for UCLA.

Pennsylvania vs. Princeton—It was just a year ago that Princeton knocked the props out from under Penn and repeat performance would be an upset of similar proportions. Two or three votes for Penn.

Iowa vs. Purdue—The Boilermakers have come a long way and there's no reason why a team that put the skids under Illinois can't do the same to Iowa.

Alabama vs. Kentucky—The Wildcats beat Vanderbilt, which Alabama didn't, but the Crimson Tide is rolling with full force now and Kentucky barely got past Michigan State. A hesitant nod to Alabama.

Southern California vs. Washington—Although tied by Rice, which bumped UCLA, the Trojans showed by swamping California that they are the class of the Coast.

Columbia vs. Cornell—The Big Red has come up with a fine passer in Lynn Dorset but he can't match the Rossides-Swiacki combination which put an end to Army's long streak.

Texas Christian vs. Baylor—After a slow start, the Horned Frogs are ready to stir up trouble in the Southwest Conference and Texas A. and M. proved that Baylor can be had. A slim vote for Texas Christian.

Louisiana State vs. Mississippi—A Southeastern Conference thriller to see which can challenge Georgia Tech for the title. Louisiana State.

Wisconsin vs. Northwestern—Despite Northwestern's win over Indiana, which tied Wisconsin, the call here goes to Wisconsin.

FRIDAY

SATURDAY

East—Penn State over Colgate, Yale over Dartmouth, Temple over Oklahoma A. and M., Syracuse over Lafayette, Harvard over Rutgers, Holy Cross over Brown, Boston College over Georgetown, Boston University over Fordham, Amherst over Tufts, Bates over Bowdoin.

Midwest—Indiana over Ohio State, Minnesota over Pittsburgh, Missouri over Nebraska, Kansas over Kansas State, Oklahoma over Iowa State, Michigan State over Marquette, Detroit over St. Mary's, Tulsa over Wichita, Drake over Iowa Teachers, South Dakota over North Dakota.

South—Vanderbilt over Auburn, Mississippi State over Tulane, North Carolina over Tennessee, West Virginia over Maryland, Virginia over Richmond, Wake Forest over William and Mary, Florida over Furman, North Carolina State over Chattanooga, VMI over Davidson.

Southwest and Far West—Arkansas over Texas A. and M., Rice over Texas Tech, Oregon over Idaho, Denver over Brigham Young, Utah over Colorado, Utah State over Montana State, Wyoming over Greeley State, Hardin-Simmons over Houston.

Out Fishing

By Jack Bell

ALONG WITH TACKLE-busting striped bass, red drum (channel bass) have added to the thrills of sport fishermen trolling in the Patuxent area near Solomons Island, Md.

George Chase, 5625 Western ave., Chevy Chase, Md., while fishing with his wife and Capt. Edgar Bowen, hooked a 45-pound channel bass fish after a hard-fought 20-minute battle.

Capt. Bowen, who also was trolling, hooked into two fish he believes were bigger than Chase's red drum. However, the captain failed to give the fish enough line, losing both fish and terminal tackle.

Besides the channel bass, Mr. and Mrs. Chase caught 12 stripers, weighing from 3 to 12 pounds.

Norman Carey of Solomons also caught a 42-pound channel bass while "striper trolling" off Point near the mouth of the Patuxent.

EARLY THIS WEEK several catches of large stripers were reported caught near Tilgmans Island. The best catch was made by Capt. Harry George and his wife and daughter, "Peg."

Trolling large spoons, they caught 11 striped bass (rock fish) that averaged better than 12 pounds.

A report from Ocracoke Island, N. C., indicates that a record was made there this past weekend. Twelve surf fishermen, all within sight of each other, landed 159 channel bass between the hours of 8 and 11 p. m.

The catch mostly was made up of "puppy" drum, weighing 6 to 12 pounds. Not unlike our Patuxent fishermen, the party made their catch unusual as well as record, by catching four tarpon, which is believed without precedent.

The only other tarpon caught off the coast of North Carolina this year was hooked by Tom Eaton, Hatteras, N. C., while fishing from a boat near Hatteras.

After an unprecedented warm Indian summer and opening of the wild waterfowl hunting season in Maryland tomorrow morning, fishing apparently is now rounding into form.

Ocean Front Trails by 4 Lengths

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 30.—Jockey Doug Dodson teamed with Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Blue Yonder to make today's Grayson Stakes a favorite affair before a crowd of 13,000 watching the opening program of the 13-day meeting here. Blue Yonder, second to Loyal Legion in his previous start, toyed with nine opponents and coasted to the finish line 4 lengths in advance of his closest rival.

Mrs. H. K. Hickey's Ocean Front was second and a length in front of H. L. Straus' March Chick in the tenth running of the test of a mile and a half.

Blue Yonder was clocked in 2:35, creditable due to the slow condition of the racing strip and paid a $3.60 mutuel.

Good Ride by Dodson

Dodson rode the perfect race on the 4-year-old son of Ariel. He allowed the colt to settle into stride and then took him under a steadying restraint while keeping him out of trouble.

Shivaree went to the front early and then was joined by Halconero. At the far turn, Ocean Front shot through on the inside rail to take command, while March Chick came into contention.

Then Dodson placed Blue Yonder to a drive and the colt circled the leaders to emerge on top. Through the stretch it was "no contest" as far as the win end of the event was concerned. Ocean Front stuck to his running guns to stave off March Chick.

The victory was worth $8920 and sent Blue Yonder's 1947 earnings to $37,945. This was his fourth visit to the winner's circle in a dozen starts.

Double Pays $133.60

The daily double paid $133.60 on the 4-and-6 combination.

The day's steeplechase proved a romp for the favorite, G. H. Bostwick's Little Sammie. The 7-year-old won by 20 lengths with Stanford Stud Farms' Fair Crystal second and Mrs. James E. Ryan's Drintown third. The winner was a $5.20 choice.

Apprentice Jockey Jack Turner suffered undetermined injuries when he fell from his mount nearing the finish line in the eighth race. It was reported that the 21-year-old Philadelphia boy became dizzy and fainted. He was in close quarters at the time and his mount, Jay D. Acres' Black Swan, was tiring.

Turner was conscious when removed from the track and taken to the Baltimore General Hospital.

Bill Bennings

At Pimlico.

DEAR FOLKS:

William Helis' Earshot and Walter M. Jeffords' Snow Goose, who furnished such a thrilling finish at Laurel Wednesday in the Queen Isabella Handicap, will have an opportunity of renewing their rivalry at Pimlico next Thursday in the mile and a sixteenth Lady Baltimore Handicap. Earshot won the decision by only a nose and another meeting between these two should give Pimlico another banner attraction.

Humphrey Finney, field secretary of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association, distributed catalogues for the annual fall sales to be held next Monday and Tuesday here and at Timonium. Morning sales at Pimlico will offer 60 head of horses in training. Monday night at Timonium 55 yearlings will be sold and Tuesday evening 75 brood mares and weanlings will make up the sale.

Jockey Willie Balzaretti swung into action for the first time since suffering a broken collarbone in a race at Garden State park. Jockey Sterling Young, president of the Jockeys Guild, packed his tack and departed for his home in Miami, Fla. He plans to resume riding after the first of the year. Henry A. Parr 3d, president of both Pimlico and Laurel, was well pleased with the results at Laurel, where he presided for the first time. Both mutuel play and attendance exceeded the 1946 figures. At the conclusion of this meeting, Parr plans a further study of the Laurel layout with a view to continuing the improvement program which was begun there this season. See you on the rail.

College Twin Bills At Armory Junked

Plans for college basketball doubleheaders in the National Guard Armory, with Georgtown and George Washington meeting the Nation's leading quintets, were junked yesterday.

Georgetown and George Washington, who had already carded an impressive schedule of seven twin bills, have been forced to abandon the scheme because of the limited seating capacity of the spacious armory.

However, the two District schools will use the Armory for single games, about 14 in all, against opponents originally scheduled in doubleheaders.

Highs Stand Pat

Despite the college's decision to change their doubleheader policy, the District public high schools will continue their original basketball plans for the Armory. The high schools will play two doubleheaders Friday, beginning January 9. The first doubleheader each Friday will begin at 3:30 p. m., and the second at 7:30.

Seating Limit 4825

Under present regulations, only 4825 persons can be seated in the armory because of an inadequate number of fire exits.

School officials felt that the reduced seating capacity would not be sufficient to seat the student bodies of their two institutions, much less take care of an anticipated heavy demand from non-student fans.

Both Rome Schwagel, Georgetown athletic director, and Max Farrington, G. U. sports chief, were all set to go ahead with the college doubleheader program and hoped to present a big-time college basketball program here in the form of doubleheaders.

They predicated their schedules on the belief they could accomodate upwards of 10,000 in the armory, but District fire inspectors poured cold water on the idea with their recent ruling limiting the seating capacity to under 5000.

Georgetown had listed Texas Wesleyan, La Salle, New York University, Maryland, Penn State and George Washington (twice). G. W. had booked Virginia, South Carolina, Navy, Maryland, Seton Hall and the Hoyas.

The collegiate doubleheaders were to begin on January 7.

4 Boys Club Teams Risk Clean Slates

Four Boys Club of Washington Football Conference teams risk their clean slates at the Ellipse Fields tomorrow as 10 games are scheduled in five weight classes.

At 10:30 a. m. on West Ellipse, Georgetown's 90-pounds 11 with three wins and one tie will tangle with its traditional rival, once beaten Alexandria. The hard-hitting Alexandrians only loss was a close 7-0 affair to Georgetown earlier in the season.

Will Harridge Calls League Meeting Today

Student at Private School

Zoeterman, who pitched four no-hit games in the past two years, is a student at the Chicago Christian high school, a private school.

Baseball rules specially provide that students in high schools belonging to the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations may not be signed until after graduation, or until after their class has graduated. Zoeterman will not be graduated until next January.

Chisox Sign Appling

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox today announced that Luke Appling had been signed for the 1948 season, his eighteenth year with the Chicago club.

The White Sox, currently under suspension by Commissioner A. B. Chandler, said that they were continuing operations on a "business as usual" basis.

Chandler declared Zoeterman's contract void and fined O'Connor $500.

In declining to pay the fine, O'Connor pointed out that Chicago Christian, a private school, does not belong to the National Federation.

When O'Connor noted that Chandler had broadened the rule to cover all high school students in the United States and Canada, O'Connor insisted the rule must be applied as written and that Chandler had exceeded his rights in expanding the interpretation.

"Resist the Coercion"

The 59-year-old O'Connor, a lawyer and for 24 years executive to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis, whom Chandler succeeded, has indicated that he might seek action in the courts in his intentions to "resist the coercion (of Chandler) to the fullest extent."

Said O'Connor:

"There is no place in baseball to seek redress. We'll have to fight our case elsewhere."

In the deadlock that developed between Chandler and O'Connor, the latter notified Chandler by wire last Friday:

"Your directive (ordering payment of the $500 fine) is in all respects illegal and we have no intention of paying the fine or recognizing your right to void this entirely legal contract."

Chandler's wire, on the same date, was:

"You are hereby notified that the Chicago American League club is denied representation under the major league agreement until my directive is complied with."

Can't Attend Draft Session

The ban prohibits the White Sox and O'Connor from taking any part in the major league draft to be held in Cincinnati November 10 or from having any representatives at the executive council sessions and joint meetings of the major leagues.

President Harridge approved the signing of Zoeterman to a White Sox contract for the 1948 season on September 9 and also approved the batting practice contract on September 15. Zoeterman was given a $2000 bonus on recommendation of Emmett "Red" Ormsby, Sox scout.

Asked if he proposed to ask the American League to present a "solid front" in his showdown with Chandler, O'Connor said:

"I don't care what stand they take—I'm willing to fight the case alone. There isn't a court in the land which wouldn't permit the accused to air his side of a case before sentence is passed. That is what happened in this case.

"We didn't violate any rules and are entirely within our rights—and we plan to fight accordingly."

Cerdan Meets Raadik Tonight in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Marcel Cerdan, middleweight champion of Europe, tonight was favored to defeat Estonia's rough and rugged Anton Raadik in their 10 round battle in the Chicago stadium tomorrow night.

Cerdan will be engaging in his fourth bout since arriving in America. He won two of them by knockouts.

The bout is expected to attract 15,000 spectators contributing a gae in excess of $50.000.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rep. Dirksen's Efforts In Reich Bear Fruit

Out in Pekin, Ill., there is a poorer section of the city with neat little fences setting off gardens which grow, not flowers, but vegetables. Even before the wartime vogue for victory gardens, these frugal residents of Pekin wasted no space on lawns and scenery.

Dirksen

From this isolationist German-American community, there came to Congress 16 years ago, brash, boyish Everett Dirksen, elected on the Republican ticket despite the Roosevelt landslide. In Washington, Dirksen has worked just as hard as his neighbors, gradually grown until he is now one of the respected leaders of the GOP Congress.

Last summer, Dirksen went back to the land of his forebears, this time as chairman of a joint Congressional Committee on the Armed Services. In Germany and Austria his committee held hearings. Sometimes acting as interpreter, Dirksen listened to all sides, called in United States Army officers, United States civilians, anybody who wanted to help present the picture of what was going on in Germany. In fact, Dirksen held such a running-fire of hearings that, in Vienna, colleagues complained, "When do we get a day off?"

"Tomorrow," replied the gentleman from Illinois, "tomorrow is Saturday. Today we work."

Russia Prepares

Net result of Dirksen's investigation: The United States Army is doing a good job . . . German textbooks have been creditably rewritten . . . The German-Austrian population is seriously undernourished. Children, main hope of future European friendship, are getting an extra meal at school (they call it Hooverspeisung) without which they would be in tragic condition . . . The Russians are scheming to take over Austria soon. Austrians are gradually being won over to the Russians not through liking them, but through fear—fear that the American Army will pull out and leave them stranded . . . They also fear what the Russians did to the Hungarians to force them into communism—ice water enemas . . . In Germany the Russians are constantly turning over their troops. Red Army soldiers are kept in Germany long enough to learn the language, then taken out of uniform and given civilian jobs there. They remain, however, trained soldiers, ready to don the uniform again . . . Russia's main European goal, concluded Dirksen, "To take over all Germany."

Stepping off the airplane in New York, the Congressman from Pekin, Ill., remarked: "If the President doesn't call a special session I am going to stage a one-man march on the White House."

A few minutes later he got a phone call saying Truman wanted to see him. The special session was subsequently called.

Note: Reporting to the President, Dirksen was strong in his praise of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany.

Sugar Controls Off

As price control goes off sugar today for the first time since the war, some housewives are wondering why the Army chose this time to buy several thousand tons of sugar for Japan and Germany.

Up until this summer the Army had sent only 12,000 tons of sugar to Japan and Germany. But recently this quota was boosted to 127,000 tons, and the Army is making another sugar purchase soon of 464,000 tons.

Reasons behind this:

1. The price of wheat is so high that, measured in calories, sugar is cheaper. Since the United States Army undertakes to feed the Japanese and German people a certain number of calories, it can get the same calory content by using more sugar and less wheat.

2. The Cuban sugar crop this year was the greatest in history, while the American beet-sugar crop in the Western States was one of the greatest.

Actually, there may be a temporary dislocation of sugar when price controls go off today, due to the fact that Eastern refiners have slowed up their imports from Cuba. This may send prices up temporarily. However, by moving Western beet sugar East, and speeding imports from Cuba, this dislocation and price boost can soon be readjusted.

Glamour Takes Back Seat

The House Un-American Activities Committee saw to it that movie stars who came to protest against the Hollywood hearing got no better treatment than the rest of the public. Such celebrities as Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Danny Kaye and Paul Henreid were herded into a long visitors' line. When they reached the door the guard snapped: "Are you the show people?"

Then he ushered them past empty front seats and plunked them down in the rear of the hearing room. Later a friendly guard moved glamour girls June Havoc and Jane Wyatt nearer the front. There they talked to two old ladies who said they were charwomen in the House Office Building.

"We old biddies are just as mad as we can be," one protested. "Why, it was plain orneriness of them to seat you in the back of the room."

Stassen Tops Republicans in Voice Charm

Robert Coar, adviser on House and Senate recordings facilities and coach for many notables said today that Harold E. Stassen tops all the likely 1948 presidential candidates with the radio voice that charms.

He placed Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Stassen's only publicly announced opponent for the Republican presidential nomination, at the bottom of his list of top-ranking Republicans and Democrats with broadcast audience appeal.

Coar announced his findings in the American magazine.

He said Stassen's voice is "extremely easy to listen to, friendly, direct, slow, and warm."

"Gen. Dwight Eisenhower—needs coaching because he talks too fast, but has a basically smooth, friendly, nonoratorical delivery.

"Senator Arthur Vandenberg—lively but uneven and occasionally oratorical.

"Gov. Thomas E. Dewey—technically superb but somewhat lacking in feeling.

"Gen. Douglas MacArthur—while rich, his voice has a crisp, commanding overtone that might antagonize potential voters.

"President Truman—dry.

"Senator Robert A. Taft—dry and arbitrary."

Bound, Bruised, Man Tells Police He Was Abducted

A 26-year-old man was found on Rock Creek Parkway early today, bruised and bound after being thrown from an automobile, he told police.

The victim, identified as Charles Knapp, 2111 H st. nw., a student at the Lewis Hotel Training School, was taken to Emergency Hospital with undetermined injuries.

Knapp was found on the roadway between the K st. and P st. turnoffs at 12:10 a. m. by a cab driver.

Anniversary of Exhibit to Mark Congress Library

An exhibit commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the main building of the Library of Congress will be shown starting Saturday in the ground-floor gallery.

Herbert Sanborn, exhibits officer, said yesterday the two-month display of 200 items will include photographs comparing today's operations with those of 50 years ago.

Architects' designs submitted in the 1873 competition will be shown. There will be photographs recording progress of construction work on the new building.

"History of New York City," by Martha Lamb, first volume to be taken from the stacks, will be exhibited, along with newspaper accounts of opening day activities.

Exhibit hours are 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. Monday through Friday, 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Saturdays and 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. Sundays.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

ELEANOR ("SWELEANOR") POWELL, queen of the tap steppers and now at Club Cairo, is a slightly superstitious gal. She believes 13 is her lucky number—because she got her dancing start at that age and there are 13 letters in her name. She also has 13 rooms in her house, invites 13 guests to parties, starts her pictures on the 13th of the month. A horoscope was cast for her some years ago and she faithfully follows its suggestion. A little gold elephant is Eleanor's good luck piece. Or could it indicate that she has Republican leanings?

Eleanor Powell
At the Club Cairo

Jerry Carter, radio's "Voice With a Heart," is currently cracking hearts at the Old New Orleans. Come Monday he'll be featured on Arthur Godfrey's guest show.

STRIP TEASE — CONSERVATIVE. Chinese robes reaching to the knees are worn by the Castle Sisters as they sidle out at the Lotus. They doff these for shorter dancing frocks of black chiffon and rose sequins. Then off come the black chiffon skirts, revealing little pink satin dancing costumes. That's all, brothers . . . Ramos and Nanette in a silkily graceful dance interlude and the classic bird amours of the Arnaut Brothers are the Lotus topliners.

NIGHT OF WITCHES. The Halloween outlook is properly eerie and bewitching. On the swanky side will be the parties in the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room and the Mayflower Lounge . . . River Bend, always a great spot for traditional parties, will pop its buttons with a big All Hallows party with all the trimmings and George Stein's music . . . "Tiny" Meeker with his band and singer Lynn Huff will stage a Halloween dance in the ballroom of the National Press Building . . . The Neptune Room will furnish fancy hats and noisemakers to all comers and Nat Conway's Shoreliners will keep the boat a-rocking.

Alfred Merrick, manager of the Roger Smith Hotel, has been upped to general manager of both that hotel and Sedgefield Inn, Greensboro, N. C. He will reside at Sedgefield Inn, a handsome resort spot. Stanley Livingston, formerly the popular assistant manager of the Roger Smith, is its new resident manager.

BIG MEN DROP IN. Whenever A. P. Giannini, one of the world's greatest bankers, comes to Washington he makes a point of dropping into Ciro's, having a chat with "Mayor" Ciro and Armando. Banker Giannini's favorite dish is risotto and Armando's risotto rates gold medals. So everybody's happy . . . Lowell Mellett, famed writer and editor, frequently visits Michel's. He's partial to its gypsy music and atmosphere.

FAVORITISMS. Yellow is the favorite color of Bob Knight, band leader of the pleasantly societyfied Lounge Riviera. "It's the color of the sun, the beautiful, golden sun," he explains. (We didn't know that Bob saw much of the sun.) . . . Favorite possession of Charlie Zeller, decorator of the Rainbow Room, Brown Derby, Anchor Room and other spots, is a sinister little fountain pen—with a spring knife in the end . . . Bob Lawrenson's Trio will open tonight at the Sea Gull, Eddie Weller's new spot near the Roger Smith Hotel. Songs by Bob Preble and piano interludes by Tony Ryan who, though sightless, is the happiest guy in town.

THE BREW COLOSSAL. Fourteen per cent beer brewed for occupation forces and visiting Americans was what most impressed Johnny Bauer, major domo of the King Cole Room, on his recent visit to Nuernberg, Germany. The idea of this powerful brew for GIs is that it'll deflect 'em from the local dynamite. Johnny's parents and in-laws at Nuernberg are among the lucky Germans. He's sent them around $2000 worth of food.

Md. Cattle Raisers Hear Dr. Kendrick

By The Associated Press

Dr. J. F. Kendrick, head of the Department of Dairy Herd Improvement Investigation in the United States Department of Agriculture, was the principal speaker yesterday at the second annual meeting of the Maryland Artificial Breeding Cooperative, Inc., at College Park.

Approximately 100 members from throughout the State were present to elect a board of directors, to serve for a year.

Kendrick suggested that the organization concentrate on providing increasingly better sires, through a policy of breeding the cooperative's bulls with the best "cow families" to be found in the State, with AA option on bull calves produced by such breeding.

Edwin Weatherby, manager of the association, said the conception rate among Maryland cattle had improved in recent months as a result of better techniques.

Elected to the board of directors on a regional basis were: Russell L. Royer, Carroll County; L. A. Andrus, Queen Anne's and John Lippincott, Cecil County. Elected to represent divisions concerned with particular breeds were: Ayrshire, Philip Knatz, Owings Mills; Guernsey, J. Herbert Snyder, Union Bridge; Holstein, J. Homer Remsberg, Middletown; Jersey, John Stiles, Rockville.

Judge Pays Fine

Fond du Lac, Wis. (U.P.)—Municipal Judge Hazen W. McEssy paid a $1 fine for overparking. A relative had parked his automobile.

U. S. Girl Tells Of 2 Years in Russian Camp

Munich, Germany, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—A 19-year-old American girl, Miss Nelle Dorothea Gagesch, said today she spent two hungry years at forced labor in Russia before escaping to the United States zone of Germany.

The girl said she was born in Chicago of an American father and Romanian mother and had lived in Romania since she was a small child. She stayed there with relatives after her mother died and her father returned to the United States.

She hopes to sail for America within two weeks to join her sister, Miss Hilde Gagesch, in Cleveland, Ohio. She said Hilda escaped from Romania to Germany before the Russians arrived.

Nelle said Russian troops in 1945 picked her up and sent her to Jasovia in the Ukraine "where I had to work in a brick factory" with young Romanian prisoners.

"We lived in a large camp under guard, working 12 hours a day with very little food," she said, speaking with apparent reluctance.

"Three times a day we were fed cabbage soup, and twice a week a spoonful of raw oats. And even for this food we had to pay from our wages. As they did not pay us enough, we had to sell part of the 800 grams of bread we got in order to pay for our meals.

"I had to carry stones, meant for rebuilding houses in Russia.

"Finally I got so weak they sent me back to the Russian zone of Germany with a transport of people unfit for work. After two months in a hospital, I succeeded in crossing the border illegally into the United States zone of Germany."

The thin, shabbily dressed girl at first refused to talk about her experiences, saying: "You don't know the Russians if you think you are safe anywhere."

Bandits Get $110,000 at Boston Plant

Boston, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Six obviously well-rehearsed bandits held up a Hyde Park factory office today and escaped with $110,000 in small bills—the payroll of the Sturtevant division of the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Wearing overalls, five of the men entered the plant grounds with workmen early in the morning. They walked into the main office about 8:15 a. m.—a few minutes after Paymaster W. R. Marshall and five assistants unlocked and entered a large vault to begin counting out the wages of 2000 workers.

The bandits escaped in an automobile in which the sixth man waited at the wheel.

While one man knocked down a special police guard and kept watch in a hallway, two others drove telephone operators away from their board, and forced them to lie on the main office floor with 20 other workers.

Another pair went directly to the vault, forced Marshall and his aides to stand against the wall and pushed the bills into a bag.

One of the bandits wore a gunny-sack over his head, and two others wore harlequin masks.

"This is no Halloween party," one the men announced in the office. "We don't want to hurt anybody—we just want the cabbage."

The bandits left behind rolls of coins which Plant Manager Gardner Derry said amounted to $2000.

The payroll money had been delivered by armored car only a few minutes before the holdup men entered the office.

Educational Body To Open 3-Day Meeting

The Commission for International Educational Reconstruction will open a three-day meeting at the Willard Hotel at 3 p. m. today with representatives from 250 educational organizations taking part.

The conference will begin with addresses by Bernard Drzewieski, director of reconstruction section of UNESCO, and Lyman Bryson, director of educational division of CBS, and consultant on education for international understanding for UNESCO.

Frau Koch Gives Birth To 7-lb. Boy

Munich, Germany, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Frau Ilse Koch, who tantalized and tortured thousands of male inmates at the notorious Buchenwald concentration camp, gave birth here to a 7-pound boy, believed to have been fathered by a prisoner who tunneled into her quarters at an internment camp.

The once arrogant, red-haired Ilse, 40, cheated the hangman when her pregnancy was discovered before her trial for war crimes. She is now serving a life sentence.

She called him Uwe Koehler, the latter having been her maiden name.

Student of Society

Norman, Okla. (U.P.).—For the first time in its history, the "Oklahoma Daily," University of Oklahoma student newspaper, has a male society editor. He is Dick King, journalism senior from Stephenville, Tex., who wants to continue society writing following his graduation.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 27, Who Has Never Been in Love, Receives Proposal of Marriage From Man Who Seems Suitable; Should She Accept?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since coming to this city I have followed your column with interested skepticism, feeling that people should solve their own problems. So imagine me, then, taking my own pen in hand. The simple reason is that I need impartial advice.

I am 27 years old and not unattractive, it seems, as I seldom lack for escorts. But so far as I am concerned, the men in my life have been just that—escorts. I have never been in love.

Now I have met a young man who is very suitable. We have the same social and religious background and many tastes in common. He wants to marry me but I hesitate, for although I care more for him than for any other man I have known, I don't love him.

Desperately Wants Home and Children

IF I ACCEPT him, I wouldn't be marrying for security, because he can give me nothing that I can't give myself. I have an interesting job that offers advancement if I choose a career—but I definitely don't. I am domestically inclined and desperately want a home and children.

If I marry Tom, I suppose I could make a happy life for myself, centering my interests in our home. But what about him? I feel he loves me; and he is so kind and sincere that I couldn't bear to bring him unhappiness.

However, I can't go on waiting forever for Prince Charming to sweep me off my feet. So in your opinion, what are the chances of success for a marriage based on "suitability"? I maintain that most marriages fail because love is, literally, blind. Yet I want some of that same love. A. N.

Girl's Views Very Confused

DEAR A. N.: There is no head or tail to your present state of mind. It is all fog, ballooning about the single fact that you have a marriage offer from a man you don't love.

Indirectly you are asking me to read the future for you and follow through with a verbal push towards or away from marriage to Tom. A preposterously large order, that.

Objectively appraised, your largely contradictory musings don't make sense. But subjectively assessed, I suppose they mean you are asking yourself, "Shall I snatch at a straw and hope for the best?"

Slant Somewhat Opportunistic

IN ONE breath you call Tom "very suitable." In another, you reflect that you don't love him and that he can't give you more security than you can provide for yourself.

Further you contend that love is blind, that most marriages fail because of it; then add that you can't, in effect, be content until you too have experienced this emotion which you distrust as deceptive and betraying.

But from this fog emerges the impression that you are opportunistically inclined to marry Tom, though given pause by the hope that maybe, by waiting, you might do better.

In Re Marriage Of Convenience

I THINK it's pious posing to imply that you are sensitively concerned about Tom's happiness, now or later. Love is the desire to give fullness of life to another; it is a wholehearted disposition to regard the other fellow's satisfaction and security as being quite as important as one's own—and since you don't love Tom, it's logical to infer that your hesitancy is due primarily to self-concern.

Assuming you marry him, it won't be a marriage based on suitability. It would be rather an attempted marriage of convenience for you, and a marriage of convenience has a chance to succeed only when two adults of mature mind are honest traders in deciding that this arrangement is their clear-cut final choice, which gives solid promise of providing each with substantially what they want of married life. M. H.

SUNDAY: Man's cousins grow hostile to his wife, whom they feted on her honeymoon last year. They say she didn't thank them sufficiently.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Establish Confidence

Unless it is a foregone conclusion that the secret is a happy one, there should never be a whispered secret between mother and one child in the presence of a second child. It not only makes the second child feel out of things but gives a feeling of favoritism that is justly resented by the youngster.

All Honor to Apples Raw and in Recipes

By Lucia Brown

THE ghost of Johnny Appleseed will be dancing in the streets this Halloween.

It's National Apple Week, and the apple is getting all the applause and attention that the fabulous Johnny once sought for it.

Johnny, you know, was the man who spent his life traveling on foot around the American frontier with his pockets full of appleseeds. That was in the early nineteenth century and Johnny—whose real name was Jonathan Chapman—planted thousands of apple trees throughout the Middle West. He was a poor man, who went barefoot and wore a sack with holes cut in it for a shirt. But he had a mission in life—planting apple seeds in advance of the coming of settlers so that they and their children could have the fruit.

This week, Americans are enjoying a bountiful crop from the millions of trees that have succeeded those Johnny planted more than a hundred years ago. They are also pausing to pay homage to the apple, one of our most useful and highly respected fruits. It's one that can be served in a wide variety of ways and enjoyed at any meal, as well as between meals.

Here's a bevy of recipes for a variety of apple dishes:

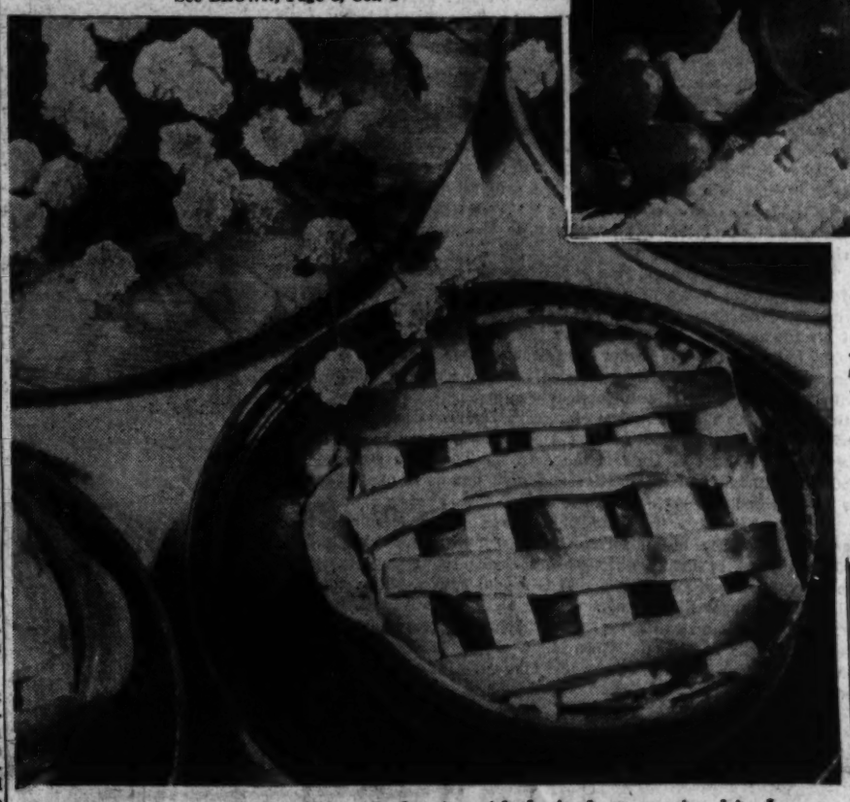
APPLE COFFEE RING

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup milk

Sift dry ingredients together, and cut in shortening. Add milk slowly to make soft dough. Roll into a square ¼ inch thick on

See BROWN, Page 8, Col. 4

Apple-and-cranberry sauce makes a refreshing accompaniment for succulent roast chicken. It can be made in a few minutes as follows: Mix 2 cups sugar and 1 cup water and bring to a boil. Add 2 cups diced, peeled apples, 4 cups cranberries, and the grated rind of 1 orange and 1 lemon. Cook about 10 minutes until cranberry skins pop open and apple pieces are clear



This deep-dish apple pie is a dessert in keeping with the food conservation drive because it features a plentiful fruit and has only one crust

TEXAS HASH

2 large onions, sliced
2 green peppers, cut fine
3 tablespoons fat
1 pound hamburg
2 cans canned tomatoes
½ cup uncooked rice
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook onions and green pepper slowly in hot fat until onions are yellow. Add hamburg and fry until mixture falls apart. Add tomatoes, rice and seasonings and mix. Put in large, greased casserole, cover, and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 45 minutes, or until done. Serves 8. To serve 4, divide recipe in half.

Variation: Instead of rice, use 1 cup uncooked spaghetti, macaroni or noodles.

I have some heirloom Polish flat silver, one piece of which puzzles me. Perhaps you can tell me its purpose. It is a serving piece with two medium short tines. The semicurved handle has a broad, dull blade which extends for about half its length. S. E. V.

An expert at the Smithsonian Institution tells me that this serving piece is undoubtedly of a type that was developed in one particular locality in Poland. He will be glad to help you make a more exact identification of the piece if you will take it to Room 350, Natural History Building, Smithsonian Institution.

My husband is very fond of steak and kidney pudding. Back in England, I used to use a very inexpensive white basin (bowl) which stood in boiling water for hours simmering. I just put the dough over the top of the bowl and covered it with a cloth or wax paper, tied with a string in the ridge just below the top of the bowl. Since I came here, I have asked in just about every department store for such a utensil but cannot find one. The clerk mentions steamer molds and such, but if you can understand my badly composed letter, you will see that the flavor of the steak and kidney goes all through the dough, like dumplings, and I don't see that it could if I use a steamer mold. I asked about a solid looking mixing bowl (sort of china material), but the clerk said she did not think I could stand it in boiling water for hours as it would probably break and the steak would finish up in the water. Can you help me locate something I can use for this purpose or suggest any other way I can cook this favorite dish. I also would like to cook Christ-

Squiggle Tells All

Your Writing Is Science To Newcomer

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ONE OF THE most interesting newcomers in Washington's diplomatic world is Mrs. Henry Helb, wife of the Netherlands Embassy Counselor. Though Mrs. Helb graduated as doctor of laws from Leyden University, she is a graphologist by profession. According to the dictionary, "graphology" means "the study of handwriting esp. as guide to character," which sounds scientific and unsensational enough. But before coming to this country Josephine Helb was warned to whisper this word because Americans are supposed to consider graphology an occult business, somehow mixed with fortune telling.

In Europe graphology is an integral and very important facet of psychiatry and handwriting analysis is used extensively to ferret out character quirks and determine what trade or profession best suits the individual. In Amsterdam, for instance, there is a psychotechnic institute to which industrial and commercial concerns pay regular retainers to analyze the potentialities of future employes.

Mrs. Helb's forte is analyzing children's handwriting (she has a boy and girl of her own), judging their characters from her findings, so they can be adjusted to this tough world in early life.

It is too technical to go into here but it's amazing what traits are revealed in a mere childish squiggle, the spacing and formation of words and letters. As wife of a diplomat, Mrs. Helb can only practice her profession privately. But she is taking advantage of the Capital's educational opportunities and is studying at the William Alanson White Foundation, a part of the Washington School of Psychiatry. Incidentally, Mrs. Helb reports that Jung, the aging, world famous psychoanalyst, is still very much alive in Switzerland. Dr. Jung has recently published two books. One is about his favorite hobby, alchemy, the other deals in part with graphology which he rates as one of the future's most important sciences.

After the Red Tape

ONE OF the most interesting conventions we've had for some time is the Inter-American Federation of Automobile Clubs. It is their seventh annual meeting and delegates have come from most of the Latin-American countries which have automobile clubs.

Motoring regulations between us and our southern neighbors have become so intricate that only the doughtiest tourist is sufficiently courageous to wade through the welter of red tape. So the main task of this get-together is to encourage tourism by simplifying intercountry rules.

Top man on our side is Henry J. Brunnier, honorary president of the American Automobile Association. Mr. Brunnier, who hails from San Francisco, is a structural engineer and has spent much of his life traveling to jobs all over the world. The AAA is his hobby but since the war he has devoted more time to it than to his business. He has made four trips to Europe, arranged meetings with representatives of automobile clubs in countries anxious to attract tourists. They've hashed over roads, fuel, cars, maps, hotels, food—everything to do with luring Americans to spend their holiday dollars in Europe. In fact the AAA has become a clearance house for all kinds of information and right now is as omniscient as Thomas Cook & Son used to be.

Mrs. Brunnier is a travel addict, too, and always accompanies her husband. She has flown some 12,000 miles over her first 100,000 miles. In flying, a 100,000-miler gets the equivalent of the Merry-Go-Round's brass ring. It is a gold button, plus a thin gold placque about the size of a visiting card. Engraved on it is Mrs. Brunnier's name and space for her to chalk up more mileage—a star for every additional 100,000 miles. Like the brass ring, if she wants a plane reservation, she just flips out gold calling card—and the place is hers!

SUPPER & DINNER DANCING

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post.

AS Mrs. Virginia Harpham plays for them, three members of the chorus try out a passage of the oratorio "Elijah." Left to right, they are Miss Dorothy McKenney and Mrs. Patty Wiggins Schliestett, newcomers to the group, and Miss Helen Shenton, who has been a member for a decade

THE Washington Choral Society is a "family affair" for many of the organization's 200 voluntary members. As Director Louis A. Potter rehearses the group for its presentation of "Elijah" Tuesday night in Constitution Hall, he is faced by his wife, second from right, and their son, Thomas Van Potter, extreme right, beginning his first season with the society. Another "singing family" includes Mrs. Mary Tate Weston (between Mrs. Potter and Thomas) and her daughter, Mrs. Anne Weston Caldwell, third from right

Choral Society's 200 Members Rehearse for 18th Season

By Bessie Hackett

With concert time drawing near, the 200 members of the Washington Choral Society are putting in longer and more strenuous hours in their rehearsal room on the top floor of Central High School.

The beginning of the civic organization's eighteenth season with the presentation of Mendelssohn's oratoria, "Elijah," in Constitution Hall Tuesday night will be an oft-repeated story to old-timers in the group, to some it will be a thrilling new experience, but for all it will be an exciting chapter in their favorite hobby—music.

Members of this cultural society range from teen-agers to white-haired oldsters, from high school youngsters to State Department employes. They come from jobs as engineers, librarians, secretaries—bringing such a mutual love of music that they even pay to sing.

The choristers include several family groups and at least 10 grandmothers.

Family Affair

When Conductor Louis A. Potter waves his hands in emphasis his eyes frequently rest upon his wife and their stalwart son, Thomas Van Potter, a sophomore at George Washington University, whose rich bass voice has just been "discovered." Mrs. Potter, who sang soprano with the group until recently, has dropped out of the concerts, but attends every rehearsal in the role of critic. Another son, Louis, jr., was a member of the society until he left to teach cello at the University of Illinois. A daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Potter Jackson, sang with the group until last season, when she accompanied her missionary husband to China.

The choral society has been a "family affair" with the Bauses of Takoma Park, Md., for about 10 years. Clayton E. Baus, a printer by trade, sings bass, and his wife, Mabel, organist for the Takoma Park Lutheran Church, is a member of the soprano section. Their daughter, Elaine (Mrs. Michael Horrigan), holds down a clerical job, keeps house and sings a sweet contralto. Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Baus, also find their favorite recreation in the Washington Choral Society.

In addition to keeping house for her husband and three of their six children, Mrs. Mary Tate Weston, contralto, is a grandmother six times over. When she sets out on rehearsal nights, she's usually accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Anne Weston Caldwell, who sings alto.

Grandmothers in Chorus

Also in the grandmother class is active, sparkling-eyed Mrs. Cecile Jordan Foster, an auditor for the United States Army. Between numbers, she regales other grannies with stories of her granddaughters, Dehlia and Janis Foster.

Among oldtimers are Robert D. Longyear, bass, a member of the State Department, who sang with a Swiss chorus in Geneva back in the twenties, when he was in the consular service; Herbert Budlong, Senate reporter; Thomas P. Martin, tenor, who spends daytime hours in the manuscript division of the Library of Congress, and Harry E. Yeide, bass, an electrical engineer with the Potomac Electric Power Co., who's been an oratorio singer for 30 years.

A pretty, brown-haired bride, just back from a Bermuda honeymoon, is among the 35 members who'll make their debut with the society Tuesday night. She is 22-year-old Patty Wiggins Schliestett, wife of Lieut. Comdr. George Van Schliestett, USN. A music teacher at Holton Arms, she formerly sang with the Philadelphia Choral Society.

Another "recruit" is 17-year-old Dorothy McKenney, second alto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. McKenney and a senior at Coolidge High School.

Bazaar to Offer Antiques for Sale

A prominent feature of the bazaar to be given by the Rector's Aid of St. Alban's Episcopal Church today will be a display of antiques, all of which are for sale. The co-chairman of this table are Mrs. W. Edmund Freeman and Mrs. Edwin Halsey.

Mrs. James G. Cumming is general chairman and others working at the various booths will be: Food, Mrs. William E. Leahy and Mrs. Paul E. Lesh; plants and flowers, Mrs. Paul S. Putsky and Mrs. C. A. Nissin; candy, Mrs. Douglas Clarke and Mrs. A. Harmer Reeside; cookies, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols and Mrs. Basil Manly; aprons, Mrs. Raymond G. Church and Mrs. F. A. Caskey.

Officials to Hear Grand Ole Opry

Sophisticates and "corn" lovers ranging from top Government officials and White House aides to juke box devotees will attend the first big-off-the-air performance of "Grand Ole Opry" this evening at Constitution Hall. The troupe will appear at its largest personal appearance show since the program originated 22 years ago in Nashville, Tenn.

Rear Admiral James H. Foskett, Naval Aide to the President, and Mrs. Foskett are expected to attend and others who have taken tickets are Representative Tom Murray and Percy Priest of Tennessee;

Mrs. Bingham To Give Luncheon

Mrs. Donald C. Bingham, president of the Ladies Board of the House of Mercy, will entertain at luncheon on November 6 at the House of Mercy, and apron sale. Jangoes will serve at the luncheon.

Mrs. Bingham's guests will be Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Adolphus Staton, Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. A. Chambers Oliphant, Mrs. William Draper Blair, Mrs. Dwight Dickinson, Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Mrs. C. Carroll Morgan and Mrs. William Flather.

All the food for the luncheon is to be donated.

Woman Peace Leader Decries War Thinking

By Genevieve Reynolds

"One out of every two adults in Sweden belong to some peace organization," revealed Mme. Signe Hojer of Stockholm in an interview yesterday preceding a tea given in her honor by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, at the home of Mrs. Orris G. Robinson.

The tall, blonde, affable leader in peace movements arrived in town Wednesday with her husband, Dr. Axel Hojer, director of the Royal Medical Board in Sweden. A graduate of the London School of Economics, she has been a member of the City Council of Stockholm for eight years, and is also president of the State Home and Family Commission.

"We hope the peace line will win," she said. "We mustn't think and talk so much about World War III. Such thinking is psychologically bad for all countries.

"In the Scandinavian countries we have tried to go on a cooperative basis with Russia," she continued. "Trade relations have been fine."

Soviet Policy Not Approved

Then she quickly added, "as an old Christian democracy naturally we don't approve of the Soviet's totalitarian political system . . . at least that is my opinion."

Mme. Hojer thinks that peace can be continued if peoples of all nations will patiently try to cooperate.

There are 97 national women's organizations that yield tremendous power in Sweden. Out of a population of approximately 6,500,000, 1,500,000 women are members of these national groups, according to the educational and public welfare leader.

"Political bigwigs," she said, "often consult and take the advice of the feminine organizations, especially on educational, welfare and children's questions."

She pointed out that 25 per cent of city council members are women and that 25 members of the "gentler sex" hold 25 of the 500 seats in the Swedish parliament. However, she admitted that general interest among her sex in international affairs is not as high as it should be. To remedy the situation she said that study groups are being formed to increase international political awareness.

Leads Women's Groups

For many years active in the peace movement, Mme. Hojer is vice president of the Scandinavian Society for International Collaboration—largest association of its kind in the Scandinavian countries—and vice president of the Swedish Section of the United Nations Association. Recently she completed 10 years as president of the Swedish section of hte Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Currently she is chairman of the Stockholm branch of that country as well as a member of the international executive committee of the league. After a three-day stay in Washington, she will visit the principal cities of this country on a speaking tour under the auspices of the United States Section, WIL. Yesterday she met the members of the District branch at a tea.

She said that women's organizations fought and succeeded in having English taught in the Swedish schools. Now English is compulsory from the elementary through high schools.

"What the United States decides politically will affect all other countries," she concluded. "We hope and pray you will continue to cherish the spirit and letter of freedom so that we may have it in Europe and other parts of the world."

Cabinet Officials to Sponsor Georgetown Homecoming

The first Georgetown Preparatory School Homecoming Ball will be given tomorrow night at the Statler Hotel. Many former students of the school who are now in college or living in distant cities plan to return to their old school for the homecoming festivities. Mrs. Frederick E. Altemus is general chairman of the event.

Patrons for the huge Benefit Ball are the Postmaster General and Mrs. Robert E. Hannegan, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, J. Glenn Beall, Mr. and Mrs. Augustine B. Kelley, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Morton D. Willcutts, Capt. and Mrs. Bartholomew W. Hogan, Capt. and Mrs. John F. Greenslade, Col. and Mrs. James H. Day, Col. and Mrs. Norman J. Eckert, Col. and Mrs. Godwin Ordway, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Wills, Mr. and Mrs. James E. McGolrick, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Markham, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Sanderson, Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Moran, and Dr. and Mrs. William F. O'Donnell.

Doings of the Day

Venture Club of Washington will hold a gala Halloween party, 6 p. m., at Betty Jones' rustic cabin on the Potomac.

Washington Branch, Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, will open its season with a meeting at 2 p. m. at the Willard Hotel with Mrs. Guy Withers, directress, presiding. Virgil Davis will give an illustrated talk on "Old Alexandria Doorways." J. W. Rissy, president, Society of Virginia and the District, has been invited to attend . . . Pennsylvania State Society will inaugurate its fall season with a dance, 10 p. m. to 1 a. m., at the Shoreham

B. C.

At least one physicians' supply store in Washington (listed under "Physicians' Supplies" in the yellow section of your telephone book) sells white enamel bowls which seem similar to the one you describe, except that they're not particularly inexpensive. They're called "solution bowls." Also, several of the local department stores have aluminum and stainless steel mixing bowls that might serve the purpose. Or would a baking dish made of heat-resistant glass, or metal, be satisfactory?

After spilling some ink on a white cashmere sweater, I soaked the spot in milk. The ink came out, but the spot turned brown. How can I get this brown color out? F. B.

You may be able to take out the spot with sodium perborate, an especially good bleach to use on woolens because it leaves them soft and fluffy. If the stain's a small one, stretch it over a bowl of hot water, dampen with water, and dust powdered sodium perborate (obtainable in drug stores) on it. Let stand a minute or two, then sponge or rinse well with water. If the stain is large, you may want to soak the entire garment for a half hour or longer in sodium perborate and soapsuds (4 tablespoons perborate to a pint of soapy water). Then wash in the usual way. For a stronger bleach, mix 1 level teaspoon sodium perborate with 1 pint hydrogen peroxide. Sponge spot with it, then rinse with water.

Can you tell me how to take rust out of a white wool knitted garment? B. H.

Spread the spot over a pan of boiling water, then squeeze lemon juice on it. After a few minutes, rinse and repeat the process. There's also a rust removing soap that comes in tubes and is sold in some of the stores of a large Washington drug chain.

A bottle of cologne broke in a drawer with my silk and rayon slips. It stained them and the dye from the black one ran into the others. How can I remove the spots? J. M.

Stains made by some colognes can be removed by washing in warm soapy water, but others are practically impossible to take out. You may be able to bleach the dye spots out of white slips by soaking in a solution of 1 pint hydrogen peroxide with a few drops of ammonia or 1 teaspoon sodium perborate added. (Use either of these mixtures immediately as they soon lose their strength.) Rinse thoroughly with water after soaking.

Market Memo

By Lucia Brown

BARGAIN turkeys—and plenty of 'em—are predicted for the coming holiday season by the gobbler industry. The crop this fall is slightly smaller than last, but there's a large supply of frozen turkeys in storage.

Besides being sold whole, the turks are coming to market as steaks (slices kneaded into a single tender piece and sold frozen), as cut-ups (drumsticks, wings, and such) and as smoked, precooked, and canned turkey. You may not find the steaks here, yet, but the other products are available. And Washingtonians are buying more turkey every day, local stores say, mainly because of reasonable prices.

To go with turkey, pork (best red meat buy now), or any other main dish this weekend, you'll find good values in green cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, and sweet potatoes. The green cabbage now available is especially attractive-looking in slaw and other raw salads. As to sweet potatoes, if you like a variety that's very yellow and cooks up soft, get Puerto Rican yams. Lighter in color and more likely to hold their shape when candied are Nancy Hall and Maryland Gold sweets.

Cheese Tidbits: Have you noticed that pineapple cheese, longtime favorite that disappeared from the market during the war, is back again? It's an American made cheese, pressed from Wisconsin type cheddar. And have you tried that new cheese product "garlic smoked" cheese? Made by a company well-known for its smoked cheeses, it comes in a roll and has plenty of flavor!

MRS. BRUCE STAFFORD, JR.
. . . October bride

Miss Lois Mears, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Mears of Sneads, Fla., and Hazel Earl Brown were married October 25 at National Baptist Memorial Church. The Rev. E. B. Willingham officiated, and a reception followed at 4316 South Capitol st. se. Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Brown of Floral, Ky.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, W. R. Cook, the bride wore a gown of long white silk, and carried white roses. Mrs. Cook attended as matron of honor, while Miss Louise McGee and Miss Martha Powers were bridesmaids.

Alvin Naugle was best man, and the ushers were Charles Gangwer and Walter Dailey.

Hessler Studios
MRS. JOHN A. KRAMER
. . . Sea Island honeymoon

Miss Mable Florence Mann, daughter of Joseph S. Mann of Scranton, Pa., and the late Mrs. Mann, was married to John Arthur Kramer on October 25 at 5 o'clock at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament. The Rev. Charles D. Gorman officiated at the candlelight ceremony, and a reception followed in the Burgundy Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Lewis O. Mann, wore a gown of ivory satin, cut on princess lines, with long train and yoke of lace. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white rose buds and lilies of the valley centered with an orchid.

Miss Dorothy Mann was maid of honor for her sister. Her gown was cerise faille taffeta, and she carried a cascade of varicolored pompons. Another sister of the bride, Miss Alice Mann, and Miss Anne Otto and Mrs. John Baylon, jr., cousins of the bride, were bridesmaids. Their gowns were blue, rose and gold, and they carried cascade bouquets of pompons.

George J. Kramer, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Paul Petersilia, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Rudolf Freier and John Olivas.

Stafford—Howe

Miss Betsy Ross Howe and Bruce Hollen Stafford, jr., were married October 25 at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Hillman Hollister officiated at the ceremony at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Stafford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ross Howe of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mr. Stafford is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hollen Stafford of Brule, Nebr.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin, fashioned with sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice. Her veil of illusion was finger-tip length and she carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, rose buds and baby's breath.

Miss Betty B. Brown, maid of honor, wore orchid taffeta, and carried bronze chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Sally Sue Howe, cousin of the bride, and Miss Hazel Collings, were dressed like the maid of honor in dark aqua and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. Melvin P. Howe and Mrs. John P. Richey, also bridesmaids, wore dusty rose and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Ernest W. Peterkin was best man, and the ushers were Melvin P. Howe, John P. Richey, Vance C. Gallagher and Max Richman.

The bride attended Florida State University, the University of North Carolina and Syracuse University. The bridegroom attended the University of Nebraska and the University of Maryland.

Schlauch—MacFarlane

The Third Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth, N. J., was the setting October 4 of the wedding of Miss Violet MacFarlane of Bayonne, N. J., and Richard Alvin Schlauch of Washington. The Rev. William G. Felmeth officiated and John M. MacFarlane gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with seed pearls. She was attended by Mrs. Sydnor U. Owens, matron of honor, wearing yellow moire and net, and the Misses Patricia and Elizabeth Kloeblen, bridesmaids, who were costumed in shell pink and powder blue taffeta, respectively.

Donald Dale Schlauch served his brother as best man and ushers were Floyd M. Schlauch, jr., and Sydnor Owens, all of Washington.

Miami Honeymoon

Miss Kathryn Ann Duzenack, daughter of Mrs. Michael Duzenack of Denver, Colo., and Walter K. Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Stephenson of Arlington, Va., were married on October 18 in St. Martin's Church.

The bride wore an aqua blue suit with frost white accessories and corsage of white orchid and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Constance McIntosh, matron of honor, was in a gold suit with black accessories and corsage of red roses. LeRoy McIntosh was best man.

After a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson will make their home at 2101 N. Scott st., Arlington.

How Well Do You Know Your Child's Teacher?

While your children are "school-age"—think of the many hours they spend with their teacher. More hours, sometimes, than they spend with you.

Think how close that teacher is to your children. How she has an opportunity to know them in a different way from you—to guide their development as they first try their wings away from home.

Think of how great her influence is—how needed her patient understanding during tender, formative years. Think of how important she is to your child's future and hence to you. Don't you want to know her better?

YOUR CHILD MAY SUFFER

Today there are not enough qualified teachers to assure every child of his full share of careful, individual guidance at school. Throughout the Nation, 70,000 teaching jobs are vacant—109,000 teachers hold only "Emergency" (sub-standard) teaching permits—2,000,000 school-age children are not in school.

YOU CAN HELP!

Every parent can, and must, help in this alarming crisis. FIRST: Acquaint yourself with school conditions in D. C., Maryland and Virgina. SECOND: Back up and work with organizations seeking to improve teachers' working and living conditions. THIRD: Get to know your children's teachers. Show them they have your understanding, friendliness and support.

1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup dried bread crumbs
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon grated orange rind

Pare and slice apples very thin. Cook with ⅓ cup water over low heat until tender. Pour into greased baking dish. Sprinkle lemon juice and molasses over top. Mix bread crumbs, orange rind and melted butter together. Sprinkle over top. Bake at 425 degrees F. 30 minutes. Serve with cream.

CRANBERRY-APPLE SNOW

3 large tart apples
½ cup powdered sugar
1 pint milk
3 eggs
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Quarter apples and steam until soft in small amount of water. Put through seive to remove peelings and let cool.

Make boiled custard by scalding milk in double boiler and adding slowly to beaten egg yolks, sugar and salt. Return to double boiler and stir until thick. When cold, add vanilla.

Beat egg whites, then add powdered sugar and beat again. Add apple pulp and beat together thoroughly. Fill bottom of sherbet glass with cranberry sauce, pile apple snow lightly on top and pour boiled custard over it. Garnish with ½ teaspoon cranberry sauce.

PETUNIA!

This is my sorrow
And this is my song . . .
Scalloped potatoes
Take too long!

But you can definitely shorten the cooking-time, Petunia, if you'll scald the milk before your pour it over the potatoes.

Calvin Explains Workings of Community Chest

The other day a group of Community Chest workers at the State Department decided to find out at first hand what happens to Chest funds.

So they dropped around to the Boys' Club at 17th st. and Massachusetts ave. se., and Charles Reynolds began to show the party around.

Pretty soon Reynolds' remarks were being supplemented by a small voice from the rear. The kibitzer turned out to be 7-year-old Calvin Dodson of 127 12th st. ne.

Calvin had apparently decided that Reynolds wasn't doing a good enough selling job.

But when Reynolds introduced his little helper to the group, Calvin promptly dived under a table in the library, to ponder his newly achieved fame.

However, it wasn't long before his enthusiasm for the club overcame his shyness, and the little guy emerged from under the table and took personal charge of the tour.

The Chest workers report that Calvin's creaky voice was completely convincing, and that he held everybody's attention—even when he relieved the monotony of his lecture with an occasional somersault.

PROGRESS REPORT

After we carried the story of the change in rental policies at Fairlington and McLean Gardens, many applicants called and wrote to tell me their troubles.

This is to report to all prospective tenants at these developments that:

1. The new owners appear to be making a sincere effort to overcome the confusion which attended the change-over.

2. After November 1, when William A. Ziegler takes charge, we're promised a more efficient processing of applications.

3. Any applicant who, for some reason, is deemed "undesirable" will be so notified when his turn comes. He will not be kept waiting indefinitely.

4. The old chronological order will be followed in all acceptances from the old waiting list.

5. "Substantially all" vacancies will be filled from that old list.

These assurances have been given me by Mr. Ziegler, who is now winding up his service with the Government, and tomorrow will begin to represent the new owners.

HELP WANTED

Earl R. Mosburg, jr., of 5511 Nevada ave. nw., is interested in rocket development, but claims that there's a shortage of English language technical books on the subject.

However there is a book in French. It's "L'Astronautique," written by Robert Esnault-Pelterie.

District Liner Mosburg hasn't been able to locate a copy of this volume, and wonders whether this column can help him.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Five playful kittens." (Ludlow 1805.)

WHO HAS THE LAST LAUGH NOW?

Malora R. Christman of the Allied Realty Corp., 6700 Wisconsin ave., Chevy Chase, Md., writes:

"We're the ones who ran that Washington Post ad reading 'House for sale, will not last long.'

"It may have been a poor job of ad writing, but a Post ad will sell anything.

"We had a lot of response from people who wanted to kid us—but we also sold the house, and two others like it, just from that one ad.

"I wish we could think of another one as bad!"

Malora, your letter reminds me of the story of the student of human nature who ran a drug store.

He purposely misspelled a word in the sign on his front window. Scores of people came into the store to tell him about it—and most of them bought something.

I wundur if the tekneek works with columz.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—Bernt Balchen, who now is president of the Royal Norwegian Air Lines, was in El Morocco one night where for the first time he revealed the history of "Mission Carpetbagger" and "Project Sonnie." Balchen was an Air Forces colonel during the war, assigned to OSS . . . For "Mission Carpetbagger" he made 166 flights to Norway, where his B-24 dropped Allied agents and 700 tons of sabotage material . . . "Project Sonnie" required 270 trips between his base at Prestwyck, Scotland, and the neutral airfields of Sweden. In those trips he evacuated 1000 Americans who had crossed the border and 5000 others, including Trygve Lie.

A group of American oil companies will present a fully equipped eye hospital to Prince Feisal of Saudi Arabia, to reduce the glaucoma casualties in his native country and, incidentally, to win the friendship of the ruling house.

The backers of "Allegro" received a ½ of 1 per cent share for each $2500 invested.

One of George Jessel's friends asked him why he is accepting night-club work, when he is in such a high tax bracket. "I like the feel of big money," Jessel explained, "and if I can keep it in my pocket for only 15 minutes—before passing it on to the Department of Internal Revenue—I'm satisfied."

Eliot Elisofon, the Life cameraman who went to Africa to photograph the Nile, traveled by car, with a native guide, and decided to drive only by day to avoid bandits, and spend the nights in the safe cities along the way. But traveling by daylight had its disadvantages. A policeman would signal his car to stop, every 10 miles, and demand identification papers . . . Elisofon noticed that only a few of these policemen were armed. Because these frequent halts disrupted his schedule, he therefor stopped only at the command of a policeman who was armed, and paid no heed to the others . . . Elisofon returned to New York, and learned that there are 17 warrants for his arrest in Egypt. Life will pay the assessments.

Within 24 hours of the front-paged suicide attempt at the Empire State tower, another man tried to make the leap and was halted. The building's inability to obtain the necessary steel is the only thing delaying the erection of an antisuicide fence near the parapet.

Eddie Cantor was heard complaining that he is losing weight. His listeners, aware that Cantor is a hypochondriac, paid no heed to him. "I stepped on the scales this morning and weighed myself. One hundred and forty-two pounds," sighed Cantor. Then he added, sadly, "And that was with a razor in my hand."
